400 DINERS SEE DARING WAITER KILL 2 BANDITS

Patrons of Chicago Cafe Are Terrified as Guns Spout Death.

HOLDUP HERO SERVED AS GERMAN SOLDIER

Third "Gold Coast" Robbery by Drunken Quartet Creates Panic.

Chicago, April 12 (A.P.).—After terrorizing two Gold Coast resorts, a gang of drunken robbers was trapped at the L'Aiglon Cafe early today and two of their number shot to death as 400 horrified guests looked on.

Three of the men, after posting a companion outside the L'Aiglon, forced their way into the place and herded guests along the ballroom wall.

The trio, lurching about, had begun stripping guests of jewels and valuables when Frank Abler, head waiter and a former German army sharpshooter, appeared with an automatic shotgun.

Waiter Kills Two.

Reaching a spot that placed guests out of range, he opened fire, the first blast killing one bandit. The other two sent a volley of pistol bullets at Abler, who, crouched on one knee, answered shot for shot.

As the second bandit pitched forward, shot through the heart, the surviving member of the trio leaped through a window and escaped in a car driven by the accomplice who had remained on guard.

During the shooting, panic reigned in the ballroom and in the dinning rooms upstairs. Women screamed and fainted and men milled about. Order was finally restored after the orchestra struck up a tune.

Amount of Loot is Small.

The slain men were identified as James Hirsch, 34, brother of a West Side physician, and Charles E. Nelson, 26.

Before the L'Aiglon attempt, police said, the quartet staged holdups at the Marlborough and Monterey Hotels.

At each place guests and employes were terrified by intoxicated men flourishing pistols. Only a small amount of money was obtained at the two hotels.

Collapse of Floor Holds Up Funeral

250 Persons Escape Injury as Church Services End Abruptly.

Otter Lake, Mich., April 12 (A.P.).—More than 250 persons escaped injury in the collapse of the main floor of the Methodist Episcopal Church here during a funeral this afternoon.

The Rev. Frank S. Hemingway was conducting services at the funeral of his cousin, Mrs. W. C. Larkin. Suddenly the walls of the building began to sway and the floor collapsed, precipitating the entire congregation into the basement. Only the pulpit and that part of the church containing the casket remained in place.

Mr. Hemingway ordered the choir to sing and then reassured the mourners, none of whom was injured. The casket was taken out the rear entrance and funeral services were concluded in the cemetery.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Almost from the inception of the national government the disposal of the public lands has been a live issue. Most of the good tillage land on the great plains has been sold but there remain large tracts suitable for pasturage and others covered with timber and holding deposits of oil, coal and metals.

These lands belong to the Nation. The States of the Atlantic seaboard have the same property rights in them as the Rocky Mountain region. But under present laws the revenue from their sale goes mostly for the benefit of the States where they are located. If these States would take over both the land and irrigation projects it would not be a bad trade for the Nation.

But the national policy of conservation is involved. These resources ought to be used for the public benefit and no guaranty has ever been devised to prevent States from turning them over to private and probably selfish speculation and exploitation. With proper restrictions against such action and reserves for national defense a feasible plan for State ownership could be developed. At least the rather unjustifiable complaint that Government lands pay no taxes and retard progress would be stilled.

Bingham Urges Right Of Senate to Impeach

Says House Is Hesitant to Attack Appointees of President.

(Associated Press.)

A constitutional amendment to give the Senate as well as the House the right to institute impeachment proceedings against Federal office-holders was proposed yesterday by Senator Bingham for "consideration and criticism" by the people.

The Connecticut Republican held the present system under which the House impeaches and the Senate tries an offender has not worked, because a majority of the House usually is elected by the same party electing the President and is "for many reasons loyal to him and unlikely to impeach any of his appointees."

The Senate, on the other hand, he said, is much more willing to criticize members of the administration than is the House, as only one-third of that body is elected at the time a President is chosen and "rarely more than a dozen senators consider themselves under political obligations to the President for their success at the polls."

Under Mr. Bingham's plan, if the Senate impeached a Government official the House would be the trial body and vice versa if the House impeached. The trial court would be composed of ten senior members of each party, four senior members of the Supreme Court, and the

PRESIDENT'S UNCLE DIES IN OKLAHOMA

Maj. Laban J. Miles, With Whom Hoover Lived in Boyhood, Expires.

Pawhuska, Okla., April 12 (A.P.).—Maj. Laban J. Miles, 87, uncle of President Hoover, with whom the President lived as a boy after the death of his father, died here at his home this afternoon. He was one of Oklahoma's most colorful figures and had served as agent for the Osage Indian Reservation by appointment of President Hayes.

When President Hoover's father died at West Branch, Iowa, the 14-year-old future President came to Pawhuska to live with his uncle, who was a brother of the President's mother. Maj. Miles, a native of Ohio, had been a figure in Indian affairs of Oklahoma for more than half a century. He came to the Osage Reservation in 1878 as an Indian agent, but subsequently was removed during the Cleveland administration.

In 1889 Maj. Miles was reappointed superintendent of the Osage agency, and held office again until July 4, 1893, when he and 40 other agents in various parts of the country were removed and replaced by military appointees.

Speaking the Osage language, Maj. Miles spent 51 years in promoting their welfare.

Funeral services will be held here Tuesday morning and burial will be at Arkansas City, Kans. Surviving are two sons, Theodore and Oakley, and two daughters, Mrs. Blanche Hopper, of Pawhuska, and Harriet Odell, of Topeka, Kans.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover was much grieved last night to learn of the death of his uncle, Maj. Laban J. Miles, with whom he lived after his father's death.

Word of the death was given the Chief Executive by the Associated Press through one of his secretaries.

It could not be learned at once whether the President, with three addresses scheduled in the next two days, would attempt to attend the funeral.

Fire in Hold Sends Ship Back to Port

Galveston, Tex., April 12 (A.P.).—The British steamer Middleham Castle, which sailed from here Friday for Europe, returned to port today with a cotton fire smouldering in her forward hold.

Steam was forced into the hold immediately and the hatches will be opened tomorrow for water lines.

The Galveston fire boat lay alongside throughout the day, but it was impossible for firemen or members of the crew to enter the burning hold on account of the smoke.

Idahoan Suggests Treating Petroleum Industry as Public Utility.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Borah yesterday demanded governmental control of the prices the public must pay for petroleum products if importations and production of oil are to be restricted.

Challenging the Government's recent moves toward limitation of imports and production, the Idaho Republican in a formal statement suggested treating the petroleum industry as a public utility.

Senator Borah's statement followed closely the administration's approval of the oil States' advisory committee's plans to limit domestic production of oil, and the Government's negotiations with the big companies for reduction of imports.

"If the imports of oil are to be restricted upon the initiative and under the protection of the Government, and if domestic production is to be restricted upon the initiative and by authority of the States with the approval of the Government," Mr. Borah said, "then the Government and the States will certainly be constrained to protect the public in the price it must pay for oil and the products of oil.

"So far as the plans have been made public, there seems to be no purpose in any program yet presented to protect the users of oil and its products. The State umpire of Oklahoma is quoted as testifying before the State commission: 'We leave the consumer out. We do not take him into consideration. That part doesn't enter into it at all.'"

Mr. Borah said: "It is just as practicable and quite as lawful to treat the supplying of oil to the public as a public utility as it is the supplying of electric power."

"The supplying of the public with oil and the products of oil may well be regarded as a public utility and subject to Government regulation," he said, quoting from Supreme Court decisions.

"Oil is indispensable to our national defense and to modern industrial life. If the oil industry is to appeal to the State and Government for a regulation in part, I see no reason why the regulation should not extend so as to protect the public.

"The control of the prices of petroleum products is so thoroughly within the power of a few companies that no one could doubt that the price of the products could be and, likely, would be raised."

He said the average price of gasoline increased from 18.09 cents a gallon in February, 1928, to 18.39 in February, 1929, while the price of Midcontinent oil dropped from an average of $2.04 to $1.20 a barrel, notwithstanding that on the later date the refineries were

Popularity of Post Bridge Tourney Is Rising Steadily

Two Enthusiasts, in Declaring First Annual Event Will Stimulate Interest, Reveal That First President Was Lover of Game of Whist.

Evidence of the widespread popularity of the first annual bridge tournament of Washington players is found in the comment and gossip of the lovers of the game which the contest has aroused, and the correspondence on the subject that comes to the bridge editor of The Post.

Reference made several days ago to the fact that the Belle Haven Country Club, of Alexandria, which is arranging, through James Duncan, chairman of the house committee, for entering teams in the tournament, is located on land once owned by George Washington, has prompted two correspondents to offer the information that the first President himself enjoyed some distinction as a whist player in his day.

"Washington, like myself, appears to have been unlucky, however, as is indicated by the losses at the game recorded in his account books," writes one enthusiast, who avers that he is a "better historian of the game than a player."

"Although 'first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen,' he was not first as a whist player, but he derived a great deal of pleasure in playing it for indoor mental recreation, and I doubt not he would wish, at least, to be in

2 PERSONS DIE IN CAR WRECKS; MANY INJURED

Mrs. Florence Greenberg, Wife of Attorney, Is One of Dead.

FIRST OF ACCIDENTS OCCURS IN VIRGINIA

A. Bernard England Is Killed as Auto Overturns Near District Line.

Mrs. Florence Greenberg, 40 years old, wife of Louis Greenberg, a local attorney, was killed yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding left the Williamsburg highway 8 miles south of Richmond, Va., and crashed into a telegraph pole. Four other passengers in the car, all Washington residents, were injured.

A. Bernard England was killed when his automobile overturned on Georgia avenue extended in Maryland, 1 mile north of the District line, and in several other accidents twelve persons were injured.

Others injured in the accident near Richmond were Louis Greenberg, 2619 University place northwest; Adolph Greenberg, same address; Mrs. W. G. Meiman, 4203 Sixteenth street northwest, and Milton Conn, 2619 University place northwest.

Treated in Richmond.

Louis Greenberg was treated at a Richmond hospital for deep cuts on his forehead. Mr. Conn received cuts on his hand and the others were badly bruised and shaken up. They were allowed to leave the hospital last night.

Henrico County officers investigating the case said the Greenberg family had bee nvisiting relatives in Newport News, Va., and were on their way home, with Mr. Conn driving, when the accident occurred.

Mr. Conn is said to have tried to pass two automobiles, which were traveling abreast in the same direction, when he was forced from the road. The machine sideswiped a telegraph pole, jumped a ditch and finally landed in the front yard of a nearby house.

Mrs. Greenberg was seated on the rear seat of the car. She died before medical aid arrived and the body was take nto a Richmond undertaking parlor.

Had Been to Dance.

Mr. England, a sales manager of the Diplomatic Coffee Co., of Silver Spring, Md., who was killed on Georgia avenue, had been to a dance at Glenwood, Md., and left the place about 3:45. An hour later his automobile overturned. It is believed that he fell asleep at the wheel. The car mounted the side of the road and then went back to the road surface and overturned.

He was found underneath the wreckage of the car and was brought to Walter Reed Hospital by Constable Lee W. Jones and Montgomery Policeman George Windham. Dr. Ralph Plew pronounced him dead of a fractured skull. His body was identified by his brother, Howard H. England, of 1231 Jefferson street northwest.

State's Attorney Stedman Prescott said no inquest is necessary. Mr. England, who lived at 616 Somerset place northwest, is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Courtney Poole, Mrs. Warfield Higgins, Mrs. G. C. Hinckley and Mrs. W. G. England, all of this city, and his brother.

Seven persons were injured and shaken up in two automobile acci-

CHERRY TREES LURE THRONGS TO TIDAL BASIN

34,240 AUTOS CROSS BRIDGE IN TEN HOURS

Estimates Place Pedestrian Visitors at 150,000; New Traffic Plan Tried.

President and public paid homage to spring and the cherry blossoms in Washington yesterday so wholeheartedly that all time records for traffic around the internationally famous drives were smashed.

Accurate figures compiled by Park Police showed that 34,240 automobiles passed the inlet bridge at the Tidal Basin between the hours of 9:30 o'clock in the morning and 7:30 o'clock in the evening. Other figures estimated that at a single point on Fourteenth street, near the entrance to the park 3,050 cars passed in an hour.

Beauty seekers afoot thronged the walks in such number that the most far reaching memory can not recall a time when more people strolled among the cherry trees, and in all it is believed that well over 150,000 enjoyed the day around the Tidal Basin and Haina Point.

President Visits Park.

President Hoover's visit to the blossom banked drives was entirely unexpected.

Driving to the west side of the Tidal Basin the President and his party left their automobile and walked about halfway around the Basin.

They were not at first recognized by the other sightseers but soon the word flashed about the throngs that the President was among them. Innumerable amateur photographers appeared as if by magic to photograph the President. The Swan Boat, carrying tourists out over the waters of the Basin, was steered close to the shore where the President was walking and followed along after him. Amateur photographers on this craft took many snap shots of the Chief Executive.

Returning to their motor car the President and his party motored around Haina Point. Mrs. Hoover waved frequently in response to greetings from the crowds. She wore a plum-colored suit trimmed with fur.

Declines Police Escort.

Upon entering Potomac Park, Mr. Hoover declined an escort of park police, who drew alongside on their motorcycles. His only escort on the trip was the usual Secret Service car.

Allan Hoover and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, jr., were members of the party.

In order to check the actual number of automobiles driving through Potomac Park yesterday, Capt. R. C. Montgomery, of the park police, stationed a man at the inlet bridge to tick off the cars as they passed. The 34,240 his machine registered in the ten hours of peak traffic broke every record for traffic in the Capital. The mark previously had been set in 1929, when a few more than 26,000 cars passed by on "Cherry Blossom Sunday."

Two civilians on foot were marveling at the traffic crawling over the outlet bridge on Fourteenth street about 3:30 o'clock. They drew a park police sergeant into the conversation and it was determined to make a

Mrs. Sabin Foresees Wet President In 1932

Scores Mrs. Peabody for Saying U. S. Women Favor Dry Law.

(United Press.)

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, national chairman of the women's organization for national prohibition reform, arrived yesterday for its national convention with the word that "no prohibitionist can be elected President of the United States in 1932."

That was Mrs. Sabin's answer to the recent declaration of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, representing the woman's national commission for law enforcement, when Mrs. Peabody and others called at the White House to assure President Hoover the "women of America favor prohibition."

"Is Mr. Hoover a prohibitionist?" Mrs. Sabin was asked after she had made her prediction regarding 1932.

"You will have to ask him," she replied.

Mrs. Sabin explained her group refrained from asking to be received at the White House "because our purpose is the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and Mr. Hoover has said several times that he is opposed to repeal."

From a membership of about 100,000 a year ago, Mrs. Sabin said her organization has expanded until it has entered 33 States, and according to the reports to be submitted tomorrow there are now more than 300,000 members.

She explains expansion by saying "conditions have become such that it now requires no courage at all to accept a local chairmanship." Mrs. Sabin added there is still some reluctance in certain parts of the South on the part of prominent women who would like to be associated with the movement but that this is being overcome.

With skill born of long experience in New York politics—in which she was once a prominent figure—Mrs. Sabin parried questions from a score of correspondents as to the political implications of the movement she heads.

Is her organization's proposal the same as the "home rule" plan of John J. Raskob, chairman of the

DICTATORSHIP LOOMS AS REPUBLICANS WIN IN SPANISH ELECTION

King Alfonso of Spain (left), and Count Romanones, his foreign minister, who will confer today on the possibility of establishing a military dictatorship in view of the results of the municipal elections held throughout the country yesterday.

Leaders, Confounded, Call Emergency Meeting of Cabinet.

MINISTRY MAY QUIT, FORCING KING TO ACT.

First Municipal Balloting in Eight Years Sees Little Disorder.

Madrid, April 12 (A.P.).—Republicans in at least two-thirds of the big cities in Spain today rolled up sweeping majorities in the first municipal elections Spain has had in eight years, and government leaders, confounded by the unexpected defeat, gathered tonight to see what was to be done about it.

Tomorrow there is to be an emergency meeting of the cabinet, and resignation of the entire ministry seems an imminent possibility. It is possible also that King Alfonso may establish a military dictatorship to check any tendency toward revolution which might be inspired by the Republican victory at the polls.

The Count of Romanones, foreign minister in the cabinet of Premier Aznar and the richest man in Spain, tonight conceded victory to the Republicans in at least two-thirds of the provincial capitals, although the monarchists appeared to be running well ahead in the smaller towns.

Sweeping Victory Unexpected.

"These are grave times for Spain," he said, "and this Republican victory is of the greatest importance. I expected the Republicans would win in a number of the larger cities, but I did not expect and such sweeping victory as they have achieved. I will confer with the king on Monday and I will tell him frankly that the situation is serious."

On the whole the elections were run off with much less trouble than had been generally expected. There were street fights in the cities, but nowhere was there a major clash, and no loss of life had been reported this evening.

The Republicans rolled up an imposing list of victories, sometimes routing the Monarchists in their own home districts. They won in Guadalajara, represented by the Count of Romanones, one of the strongest men in the Aznar cabinet. They were victorious at San Sebastian and Aranguez, where King Alfonso has residences. They appeared to have won 28 out of the 30 contested seats in the Madrid city council, and similar returns came from Seville, Barcelona, Valencia, Oviedo and several other cities.

Clean Sweeps in Rebel Area.

In Huesca and Jaca, where the most serious fighting of last December's revolution occurred, the Republicans made a clean sweep. At Cadiz, however, the Monarchists won all 40 of the council's seats. One of the Republican candidates at Valencia was Sigrido Blasco-Ibanez, son of the famous novelist. He appeared to have won.

Four million voters, it was estimated, participated in the elections despite cloudy, threatening weather. It was the heaviest vote ever cast in Spain and even the most optimistic of the Republican leaders were surprised at the enthusiasm of the electorate.

Throughout the kingdom the Republicans continued the spectacular campaign which they had carried on for several weeks prior to election day, and the cheers of the people followed their band wagons through the streets.

Sometimes the crowds grew unruly, but police were prepared for disorders and there was a minimum of fighting. In the central square of Madrid saand was spread deeply over the pavement so that police mounts would not slip and fall when they charged the crowds.

Fraud Charges Hurled.

There were charges and counter-charges of vote buying and numerous arrests resulted.

These municipal elections, important as they were to a people which has not exercised the franchise since the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera began, are perhaps less important than the two general elections which are to follow next month and the month after.

In May the voters will elect members of the lower house of the na-

FREDERICK THEATER HOLDUP NETS $400

Robber Escapes in District Car Without Waiting for $800 More.

The hum of an air ventilator frightened an armed robber, believed to be from Washington, who early yesterday forced the assistant manager of the Tivoli Theater in Frederick, Md., to open a safe and hand over $400.

Before Crawford Rhodes, theater official, could hand over an additional $800 that was in the safe the air ventilator whirred and the robber fled through a side door and made his getaway in an automobile carrying Washington license tags.

The robber, who is believed to have concealed himself in the theater after the closing performance, made his appearance in the office after George Payette, of Washington, the manager, had left.

Rhodes was making out a financial statement for the day and had locked $1,200 in the safe. This amount comprised the receipts of the Tivoli Theater and the City Opera House, both under the same management.

The robber commanded Rhodes to open the safe. On his first attempt Rhodes failed and was warned to be sure to open it on the next try. He did and handed over a bag containing $400. He was about to give the balance of receipts when the ventilator started and the man fled.

All were brought to a hospital here for treatment.

American Woman Expelled By Soviets for Stalin Joke

Magazine Writer and Husband, Consulting Engineer for Russian Government, Ordered to Leave Country for Anecdote Printed in Recent Article.

Berlin, April 12 (A.P.).—Eve Gareste Grady, an American magazine writer, was expelled from Soviet Russia because of a joke she told at the expense of Joseph Stalin, she declared today on her arrival here from Moscow.

The article that aroused the government's anger was published in an American magazine and was entitled "See Russia and Die Laughing." Her husband, William H. Grady, a consulting engineer of New York, also was expelled with instructions to "keep your wife out of Russia." He was employed in the Soviet Union as an engineering expert.

The anecdote which Mrs. Grady says is "going the rounds" in Moscow related that a Jewish boy saved a stranger from drowning, whereupon the grateful stranger told him to ask anything he wished and it would be granted.

"I am powerful; I am Stalin," he was said to have remarked.

The boy, quite overcome, gasped and then said:

"If you are really Stalin, then don't tell any one it was I who saved you."

Mrs. Grady expressed surprise that the foreign office so frankly specified the Stalin joke as the grounds for expulsion instead of naming some broader reason for official irritation.

"We were in Kharkov when Moscow sent instructions to have us ex-tional legislature, and in June there is to be a senatorial election.

The throne itself is at stake in these three elections, for the Republicans demand what their party name indicates. They stand for the abdication of King Alfonso and establishment of a full constitutional republican government in Spain.

Rebel Leader One of Party Chiefs.

The Republican party in this election is a fusion of several political groups whose common ground is opposition to the monarchy. One of its outstanding leaders is Alcala Zamora, who was proclaimed president of the "Spanish Republic" in last December's abortive revolution, and subsequently was imprisoned and court-martialed.

Zamora and Miguel Maura, who was imprisoned with him, were elected to the municipal council in Madrid today along with other leaders of the movement, including Largo Cavallero, Fernando de Los Rios, Alvaro Albornoz and Angel Galarza.

The Constitutionalist party, which polled a very slim vote, is headed by Santiago Alba, regarded as one of Spain's most powerful political figures, and former Premier Sanchez Guerra, in whose overthrow the Count of Romanones was instrumental.

RIGHT OF SENATORS TO IMPEACH URGED

"It is ovious," Mr. Bingham said, "that in the last analysis the safest protection which the people can have against arbitrary, tyrannical or dishonest public officials is through impeachment proceedings of some sort or other. The fact that during the past 140 years the House has only once brought before the Senate an administrative or executive officer appointed by the President shows that the present system as provided for in the Constitution does not work."

The tendency of the Senate in recent years to investigate Cabinet officers, Bureau and commission chiefs, he argued, has destroyed its effectiveness as a court of final jurisdiction, "just as the evolution of our political parties has destroyed the effectiveness of the House as the source of impeachments."

Referring to the Senate's unprecedented action in bringing court proceedings to test its right to recall the appointment of Chairman Smith, of the Power Commission, Mr. Bingham said the House would not impeach Dr. Smith and the Senate could not constitutionally do so.

"Accordingly the Senate is taking advantage of a technicality in an effort to accomplish the same purpose," he added. "I disapproved of its action, first, because while technically correct under the rules it was actually an impeachment and therefore unconstitutional; second, because I admire Dr. Smith. Nevertheless I do not see why the Senate should not be given the right to impeach."

He argued further that when the Constitution was written it was not contemplated that the President would be nominated by political conventions or elected by political parties.

"The President was to be elected by an electoral college—a device which has not worked," he said.

With a trial court such as he proposes, Mr. Bingham said, each party would protect its viewpoint, and the senior judges of the Supreme Court would have the balance of power.

BORAH DEMANDS U. S. CONTROL OIL PRICES

recovering more gasoline from each barrel of crude.

"The fall of the price of crude oil," he added, "had no effect upon gasoline, except to raise the price of it. It seems perfectly clear that these prices were controlled; and if they are to be controlled they ought to be controlled by public authority."

The Idaho senator cited statistics which he said showed 80 per cent of the $12,000,000,000 oil industry is in the hands of twenty companies, which produce about 50 per cent of the Nation's annual crude production.

Consumer Protection Held Needed.

"It also appears," he said, "that the ten Standard companies, which, after the dissolution in 1911, started with assets of probably 600 million dollars, have since that time paid $1,918,000,000 in cash dividends, $1,544,000,000 in stock dividends, and plowed back into assets something like four billion dollars of earned profits.

"It also appears that the ten other companies, making up the 20 companies which hold 80 per cent of the assets of the oil industry, have been enjoying similar profits.

"It would appear, therefore, that, if the Government is going to limit production and thereby augment both the tendency and the power to increase prices, any fair scheme would have to include protection to the consumers."

LAST HOPE TO SAVE APPLE MARKET GONE

Argentine Decree Will Bar Fruit From Virginia After July 1.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 12.—Commercial apple growers of Virginia are given little or no hope that the Argentine government will suspend operation of a decree forbidding entry into that country of apples in barrels or in any other container unless each apple is wrapped in water-proof paper. Efforts to induce Argentine authorities to give a hearing to Virginia shippers have been unsuccessful.

A letter received today from United States Senator Claude A. Swanson, of Virginia, inclosed a copy of a communication from the ambassador at Buenos Aires, through the State Department, quoting the ambassador as saying that he had on various occasions conveyed to the Argentine authorities your suggestion regarding the desirability that the commission studying the problem of regulating the importation of fresh fruit should postpone its decision in order to permit an expert from the United States to explain American methods of packing apples in barrels. His efforts, the letter said, have been unavailing, for the Argentine government has issued a decree, effective July 1, which prohibits importation of barreled apples.

Fruit growers stated today that the bulk of apples grown in Virginia are shipped in barrels, and that the order of the South American republic would as a result deprive them of that market. Even if the barrel restriction were removed, they said they could not afford to go to the unusual expense of wrapping each apple in water-proof paper.

For some years at least 75 per cent of the apples consumed in Argentina have been grown in and shipped from Virginia. In the last year or two these shipments have averaged 200,000 barrels per season. In addition to the decree on containers and paper wrapping, the Buenos Aires government has made a considerable increase in the tariff levied on apple imports from the United States, fruit growers said.

Forest Fire Rages Near Hagerstown

Scores of Men Unable to Prevent Burning of Timbered Area.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 12.—A forest fire was sweeping Richard Mountain, north of Clear Springs, Md., tonight, with scores of men thus far unable to check its progress.

The fire started on a ridge above Blairs Valley, near the Mason and Dixon line, early today, and a large force of men believed they had it under control, but it broke out anew this evening. Approximately 100 acres of timber have been burned over. The fire tonight was near the farm of Clinton Barnhart, but it appeared in no danger.

Another forest fire last night burned over several hundred acres of timberland between Big Springs Station and Big Poll, but was brought under control early today. Both of the fires are in the Blue Ridge Range about 15 miles west of Hagerstown. Absence of wind prevented the fires from getting beyond complete control.

LIBRARIANS ELECT DR. G. F. BOWERMAN

County Movement Growth Is Told at Meeting in Annapolis.

Other officers elected are: Vice president for Maryland, Miss Pauline McCauley, of the Enoch Pratt Library, Baltimore; vice president for the District of Columbia, Miss Faustine Dennis, of the Library of Congress; secretary, Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger, of the Mount Pleasant Branch of the Public Library, Washington; treasurer, Miss Alice V. Reynolds, librarian of the Consolidated Gas & Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore.

At the morning session in McDowell Hall short talks were given by representatives of visiting and member associations. Miss Maud I. Stull spoke on county library work in New Jersey, and of the excellent work of the summer Library School at Ocean City, which offers the equivalent of a full course in library science in four summer sessions. Miss Mary Titcomb, librarian of the Hagerstown Public Library, talked of Maryland county libraries which are among the oldest county libraries in the United States, and advanced a plan for cooperation of the county library and the county schools for furnishing books to school children.

Speaker Uses Moving Picture.

A moving picture was employed by Miss Nellie Morton, of Wilmington, Del., to demonstrate the work of the New Castle County Library, of which she is librarian.

Five years of county library service have been given the people of the more fortunate counties of Pennsylvania, according to Miss Alice R. Eaton, librarian of the Public Library of Harrisburg, who stressed the slowness with which a rural community becomes conscious of the need of book service. Frederick W. Ashley, of the Library of Congress, gave the history of the Gutenberg Bible.

The principal speaker, Dr. Richard T. Haines Halsey, resident member of the board of visitors and governors of St. John's College, lectured on "Annapolis, Its Culture and Its Architecture." He pointed to buildings in Annapolis today as examples of the finest Georgian architecture in the United States, and evidence of the culture that made Annapolis one of the earliest centers of fashion and learning in America. The first free library in America was in Annapolis, and that her citizens realized the value of books is shown by eighteenth century advertisements of book importations, book sellers and book binders. Lantern slides were used by Dr. Halsey to show the excellence of the colonial architecture of the Maryland capital, particularly the work of Matthew Buckland, designer of the Hammond-Harwood and the Chase houses, and a student of books, from which he took his chief architectural inspiration, lacking examples in a primitive country.

Members Are College Guests.

Members of the association were the guests of St. John's College at luncheon in Randall Hall. During the afternoon visits were made to the Hammond-Harwood House, the Chase House and to the United States Naval Academy, where Prof. Kraft, curator of the museum, conducted the group through the various rooms after a short talk in Mahan Hall. This was followed by a tour of the buildings and grounds.

Dr. Adolf E. Zucker, professor of modern languages and comparative literature at the University of Maryland, speaker at the dinner in Carvel Hall, chose as his subject "Theaterwissenschaft," based on his observations during a six months' visit to Germany. He emphasized the success of the Folk Theater in Germany, the result of 40 years of movement toward a popular stage, culminating in erection of a Folk Theater Building in Berlin in 1912, toward which the city gave the site and 2,000,000 marks. The folk theater, Dr. Zucker said, gives the working man an opportunity to see the best type of stage presentation at a price within his reach, and because of the system of drawing seats by lot he has a chance to occupy the best seats part of the time irrespective of the price he pays for admission. There are 336 state or municipal theaters in Germany subsidized by the state, according to Dr. Zucker, and so strongly are the principal authorities convinced of the cultural value of the theater that the City of Berlin exempts the Max Reinhardt Theater, a purely private enterprise, from taxation.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mamie Childs and the late Harry Childs, Winchester, and Mr. Sprint is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Trone Sprint, Clarke County, Va.

ESSAY GROUP FACES FINALS ON SATURDAY

Men and women prominent in social, educational and governmental circles comprise the jury of selection which will name the two boys and girls as "Envoys of Friendship" at the finals Saturday of the good-will trip to Europe contest being sponsored by the United States Flag Association, with the cooperation of The Washington Post. Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, patroness of the two Washington high school "Envoys of Friendship," will be guest of honor at the finals Saturday.

William J. Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, is chairman of the jury of selection, the other members of which are Miss Jessie Dell, only woman member of the United States Civil Service Commission and highest paid woman in the Government service; Mrs. Henry H. Flather, notable for her work with the Girl Scouts; Harry King, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. James Lansburgh, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University; Mrs. George Meeta, prominent social leader; the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University; Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, prominent socially and an active worker in social work in Washington; William Tyler Page, author of "The American's Creed," and Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the District of Columbia Board of Commissioners.

Officials Will Be Present.

High ranking governmental and Army, Navy and Marine officials, in addition to members of the Diplomatic Corps and many social leaders of Washington, will be present at Central High School Saturday to see the awards made to the two "Envoys of Friendship" selected by the jury of selection, and the medals awarded to the 60 boys and girls who qualified for the preliminary test at the Franklin Administration Building Saturday. An elaborate program has been prepared by the officials of the United States Flag Association for this occasion.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, patroness of the boy and girl from the Washington High Schools, who will be guest of honor at today's meeting, is paying all expenses for the two lucky children selected by the jury of selection Saturday.

It is at her request that the United States Flag Association, with the cooperation of The Washington Post, is holding the contest which will result in the naming of one boy and one girl Saturday who will enjoy a patriotic pilgrimage to American historical points of interest, followed by a good-will trip to London and Paris where they will meet English and French children in a good-will mass meeting, making friendships which are expected to avoid future wars by bringing questions of dispute between nations before the conference table rather than on the battlefield.

Committee Meets Today.

Members of the committee which judged the 60 students entered in the preliminary test Saturday will meet again today in an effort to decide which six boys and six girls will be eligible for the final test Saturday. The task has been terrific, and thanks to the United States Flag Association, The Washington Post and the people of Washington are due to these six instructors, who gave up the last day of their Easter holiday season to act as judges in this contest. After viewing the 60 boys and girls who qualified for the preliminary test, the writer is constrained to believe that any twelve who qualify will be worthy representatives of the schools of Washington.

The general public is invited to be present at the finals next Saturday at Central High School. Acting on the belief that parents and teachers of the boys and girls who qualified for the finals, and who will be awarded the "Old Glory" medal of the flag association on this occasion will desire to be present when the awards are made, the flag association has issued invitations to the public in general, who will be accommodated as long as the seats last.

To Award Medals Saturday.

It was decided to award the medals won Saturday at next Saturday's meeting, in order that all who qualified might have the honor of receiving their medal in the presence of the notable assemblage that will gather to see the final naming of the two "envoys" who will represent the Washington schools on the good-will trip to London and Paris.

The program for Saturday will consist of selections by the orchestra from the United States Army Band, the recitation of the prize winning essays by the writers, announcement of awards to the various contestants and the presentation of the decorations.

The winners in the preliminary contest, who will take part in the finals, will be announced tomorrow morning in The Washington Post. Contestants and their parents are requested not to telephone for information, as it can not be given, the first announcement being made tomorrow in The Post.

AD CONTEST NEARS END OF FIRST WEEK

Only Two Days Are Left in Post-Zain Competition of Opening Period.

Only two more days to beat the deadline on the first week's entries in The Post-Zain Amateur Ad Writing Contest!

Write an ad.

Don't wish you had.

All ads mailed by nonprofessionals before midnight Wednesday will be eligible for the $100 cash award and 175 merchandise prizes to be distributed among the first week's winners.

Of course there will be six more weekly periods with similar prize awards, and a grand prize of $1,000 at the end for the best ad of all. But you will want to get in at the start.

Send in your ad today to The Post-Zain Ad Writing Editor.

Advertisers Are Listed.

You will find a list of 35 Post-Zain advertisers listed in another column, together with a complete list of rules relating in detail how to go about winning a prize for yourself.

It is easier than you imagine to write an ad. Just because you never tried before, or never thought you would like to write advertising in a professional way, is no reason why you should not participate in this strictly amateur contest.

You will find your tools at hand, a piece of paper about twice the size of a postcard, a pencil and an idea or two. The idea doesn't even have to be altogether original, if it is presented in a striking way. Nor any mistakes in spelling, punctuation or layout, be counted against you.

To make it easier for the judges—a board of them, all trained advertising men, will meet Thursday for the first week's judging—write your ads each on a separate sheet of paper.

Write Name in Corner.

In the upper left-hand corner place the name of the firm you have decided to write about. You can write as many separate ads about different firms as you want, of course. On the same sheet write your ad, and on the reverse side, your name and address and also telephone number. Your name and address should also appear on the back of the envelope you mail us.

Friday morning we will announce the winner of the first week's $100 cash prize, and the 175 prizes in merchandising.

Remember that more than $10,000 in cash and merchandise will be awarded during the seven weeks of the contest. You ought to be clever enough to win some of this for yourself.

Participation in The Post-Zain Amateur Ad-Writing Contest places you under no obligatoins whatsoever. And there is no limit to the number of prizes you can win.

Remember Features Stressed.

In writing an ad about Wilkins coffee, remember features stressed by this Washington concern—quality, freshness and price. D. J. Kaufman, Inc., dealers in men's wear, speak for themselves as an advertising suggestion. They have three stores in Washington now. Just now, Underwood & Underwood, another of our advertisers, are emphasizing the amazing new method of child photography made possible at their studio, through use of the Beidler-Viken camera. It might be well to take a look at the fine new quarters of Thomas E. Clark, Inc., at 3407 Connecticut avenue, before you write your ad. And remember that Bailey Tire Stores are offering a standard passenger size tire every week to amateurs who submit the best ad on their stores and their product, U. S. Royal Tires. The prize is in addition to others offered by The Post.

Announcement that the Washington Gas Light Co. will give a $200 Janitrol Gas Conversion Burner to the author of the best ad on Automatic Gas Heat, has precipitated a flood of letters. The company has its own way of giving ad-writing tips on its product. Every Thursday and Saturday at 6:15 p. m. an advertisement about gas heat is broadcast over WRC.

AD THAT PLEASES ARTISTS

The Rimacs and Havana Rumba Orchestra have a satisfied smile as they look at the amateur ad that Miss Ciro Rosemary has just finished writing for The Post-Zain Ad-Writing Contest.

They were brought to America to introduce here the original Cuban dance rhythms and interpret these native dances without the eccentric gyrations American dancers have given the Rumba rhythms, now so popular with American audiences.

Ciro Rosary and Charlie Boy Rimac have appeared at a number of Cuban theaters and are especially well known in their native Havana. They are now on a 60-week vaudeville tour, at the completion of which they will return to Cuba. Yesterday they combined their ideas in the following ad about one of the advertisers cooperating in The Post-Zain contest.

An Idea That Is Already Sold

Edgar Morris Sales Co.
Westinghouse Refrigerators.

"The idea of Electric Refrigeration is already sold to the great Commonwealth of America. But which Refrigerator is the best? Mr. and Mrs. Householder believe that the name and organization back of the Refrigerator counts. Westinghouse on things electric is like Sterling on Silver.

"Mr. and Mrs. Householder visit the Edgar Morris Sales Co., distributors for Westinghouse Refrigerators in Washington. They like the quiet way Westinghouse Refrigerators operate and know that it is mechanically perfect; that it is satisfactory in performance, service and economy. The guests are enthusiastic when they see the new Refrigerator. They agree that the Westinghouse Refrigerator is the finished touch to Mr. and Mrs. Householder's happy, well-run, modernly up-to-date American Home."

'Murdered' Blonde Arises And Disrobes at Gay Ball

Victim of Model Killing Won't Stay "Dead" and New Orleans Revelers Get Shock When She Quits Casket and Throws Off Veils.

New Orleans, April 12 (U.P.).—More than 500 of New Orleans' artists and writers, and those who would like to be artists and writers, not to mention several squads of the city's best police, worked until the early hours today attempting to solve the model murder mystery.

Of course everybody knew there was no murder, even after the artists carried in a big gray casket with a petit blonde girl, the victim apparently deep in her last sleep.

But because the victim of the model murder had "rehearsed" her part too well, she just could not stay "dead."

In the midst of the inquest the murder victim sat upright in the casket, her body shrouded in flimsy orchid veils. She gave a shriek which was realistic, and from her casket she tumbled.

Staggering in her awakening she discarded her flimsy veils, there must have been seven of them, and fell to the floor.

The policemen who were attending to give the "inquest" a realistic touch, turned pink and wondered what to do on such an occasion.

The assembly was disgruntled—not at the model murder victim, but because they had been hoaxed into coming to the annual arts and crafts ball with promise of the solution of the murder in Dunhill Lighter's apartment and to find the model of the murder on a bust.

After the first shock, however, the spirit of the occasion demanded there be a murder. That seemed impossible because no one wanted to be murdered. Then the gaily costumed revelers decided if there were to be no murder there should be plenty of dead soldiers.

It was a weird picture because every one admitted to the arts and crafts courtyard, where the ball was held, had to be costumed.

Costumes, when the party started at midnight, were not so extreme. As the gayety continued, however, there was a general liberalization of policy, caused mostly by rough handling.

Pajamas were the most common, and these proved to be easily torn. One young woman who thoughtlessly wore a costume made of paper was forced to make a hasty exit, wearing the coat of a policeman. She had been "the front page."

DR. JOHN A. FOOTE, PEDIATRIST, DEAD

G. U. School of Medicine Dean Is Internationally Known as Scholar.

Dr. John A. Foote, internationally known pediatrist and dean of the Georgetown University School of Medicine, with which he had been connected during 25 years of practice in Washington, died early yesterday morning at his home, 1861 Mintwood place, after an illness of about two months. He was 57 years old.

Death was due to heart disease, aggravated by a severe attack of grip. He was conscious to the last, and early Saturday night appeared to be in a slightly improved condition. Later he suffered a relapse. For several weeks his condition was such that physicians held little hope for his recovery.

Italy decorated Dr. Foote last November with the rank of Officer of the Crown of Italy, one of the oldest orders of the kingdom. Dr. Foote had made important studies and translations of early Italian medical history.

Dr. Foote, a member of the Child Health Congress, appointed by President Hoover, attended the International Congress on Pediatrics held in August, 1930, at Stockholm. He also recently attended an important international health congress at Havana as a delegate of the United States to the Pan-American Child Conference at Havana.

For many years he had been on the staffs of Children's, Providence, Foundling and Gallinger Hospitals.

Dr. Foote was appointed dean of the Georgetown University School of Medicine in April, 1929, the same year in which he was elected president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

At the time of his appointment, the medical department at Georgetown was undergoing a period of expansion and the planning and construction of its new building on Reservoir road, much of which work fell upon Dr. Foote's shoulder.

Graduated From Georgetown.

Dr. Foote was born June 9, 1874, at Archbald, Pa., the son of Dr. John and Margaret (Andrew) Foote. Coming to Washington, he entered Georgetown College, graduating with the degree of bachelor of arts. In was the beginning of a long affiliation with the university, for he thereupon entered the school of medicine and received his medical degree in 1906. He pursued postgraduate work in medicine at the University of Berlin and later made trips to Berlin to engage in research work with children's specialists.

Soon after graduation from Georgetown he was made a member of the medical faculty and engaged in private practice. Since 1917 he had served principally as professor of the diseases of children and in that capacity also was a member of the Georgetown University Hospital staff, which is under supervision of the medical school.

In 1925 the university conferred upon him the honorary degree of master of arts in recognition of the literary talents in which he indulged even outside the realm of medicine.

Dr. Foote had varied interests. He was interested in the progress of general science and in 1924 was elected a member of the board of trustees of the National Geographic Society. For ten years or more he had been a fellow of the Royal Geographic Society of London and the Geographic Society of Paris.

Was Accomplished Musician.

He also was an accomplished musician and composed one of the popular marches used frequently in Georgetown programs. His chief interest outside his professorial duties and practice lay in the field of medical research. He was a director and member of the executive committee of the American Child Hygiene Association and at one time was editor of Mother and Child, a child hygiene magazine. He frequently contributed articles on child health to medical journals and other publications.

During the World War Dr. Foote was a member of the Council of National Defense and lecturer on social hygiene for the Bureau of Training Camp Activities and the United States Public Health Service. Medical societies to which he belonged in addition to the American Medical Association, in which he had been a leading figure for years, included the American Pedriatic Society, the German Society for Medical History, the French Society of Medical History, the Medical History Club, of which he was one time president, and the Georgetown Clinical Society.

Active in Alumni Association.

He was active in the Georgetown Alumni Association and a member of the Cosmos and Chevy Chase Clubs.

Dr. Foote was married to Miss Lois Gibson Dyer of Washington, in 1910. His widow and two children, William Dyer Foote and Mary Virginia Foote, survive him. He resided at 1861 Mintwood place.

He also is survived by three brothers, Joseph Foote, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Ernest and Richard Foote, of Archbald, Pa., and two sisters, Miss Catherine Foote and Mrs. Mary Cawley, also of Archbald.

Services will be conducted at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in Dahlgren Chapel at Georgetown College, followed by interment in Holy Rood Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., president of Georgetown, will be celebrant at the mass.

STUDY OF WAR DEBT URGED AS TRADE AID

International Chamber Quiz Favored in Letter of Herbert S. Houston.

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—A proposal that the International Chamber of Commerce undertake a study of the war debt question in the interests of international business improvement was laid before the American delegation of the chamber today in a letter by Herbert S. Houston, a member of the delegation.

Mr. Houston does not recommend that the chamber now make recommendations or debate the subject, but that it appoint a committee to investigate and then to make suitable proposals.

He recalls that Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, has recommended debt cancellation as a sound business measure in the interest of this country; and that Albert Wiggin, president of the Chase National Bank, has urged immediate reexamination of the question in the same interest.

Though not including the idea in his draft resolution for the action of the chamber, Mr. Houston says his suggestion that cancellation or reduction "of any part of the debt be conditioned on a proportionate reduction of armament" has met favorable reception in many quarters.

Debts, now being paid the United States by Great Britain, France, Italy and others of the victorious allies, are held to form too great a burden on these nations, a drain that has thrown international trade out of balance to the detriment of the world's business.

Members of the American delegation are Silas H. Strawn, chairman; Owen D. Young, Thomas W. Lamont and other American business leaders

Cermak Arrives Today For Miami Beach Rest

Miami Beach, Fla., April 12, (A.P.). Anton J. Cermak, Chicago's new mayor, will arrive here tomorrow to rest at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Jirka.

Mrs. Jirka said she received word from her father that he would arrive by train tomorrow afternoon. He will be accompanied by a party of friends, she said.

PRESIDENT RETURNS; TO DELIVER 3 TALKS

Hoover Also to Throw First Ball of Opening Game Here Tomorrow.

President Hoover was back in the Capital yesterday from Cincinnati, where he attended the funeral of his personal friend and political ally, Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House for the past six years.

The presidential special arrived at 7 o'clock and the Chief Executive and Mrs. Hoover detrained immediately and went to the White House for breakfast. The return trip was made leisurely with stops at a number of places long enough for Mr. and Mrs. Hoover to make back-platform appearances.

On his return the President was faced with a busy round of speeches, three in two days, and also the pleasant duty of throwing out the first ball in the opening game of the American League season here tomorrow between Washington and Philadelphia.

First Address Today.

The first address will be delivered today to the opening session of the annual meeting of the American Red Cross. Tomorrow noon he will address a meeting at the Pan-American Union celebrating Pan-American day. April 14 was set aside as Pan-American Day last year by Mr. Hoover in a presidential proclamation.

Upon returning from the ball game in the afternoon he will deliver an address as part of the fiftieth birthday celebration of Tuskegee Institute. All the speeches will be broadcast over Nation-wide hookups.

The Tuskegee address will be transmitted to the chapel of the Negro institute by telephonic arrangement adn will be broadcast from there.

A presidential custom of not giving autographs from the back platform of his train was broken by Mr. Hoover at Chillicothe, Ohio, where his train stopped.

Girl Gets Autograph.

A little girl offered her autograph book and was being turned away by police when Mr. Hoover saw the incident. He sent for the book, and, until the train started ten minutes later, he was busy writing his name. He used all the ink from his pen and borrowed a pen from Postmaster General Brown, standing beside him.

At Parkersburg, W. Va., a man on the edge of the crowd caused a roar of laughter when he shouted:

"Come on, Hoover, what's the matter with you? Are you tongue tied?"

President Hoover joined in the laughter and informed his questioner he remained tongue tied at that time of night. Mrs. Hoover chatted with a group of children clustered around the end of the train.

$225,000 Fire Hits College in Illinois

Only One of Mount Morris Buildings Unscathed; Town Threatened.

Mount Morris, Ill., April 12 (A.P.). Fanned by a high wind, flames today swept through Mount Morris College and left only one building unscathed. Damage to the college, a Dunkard institution and one of the oldest schools in the midwest, was estimated by officials at $225,000.

The fire broke out in the gymnasium, spread to the girls' dormitory and the combination library, laboratory and classroom building, destroying them. The roof of the administration hall was damaged.

Flying sparks for a time threatened the town's business district but firemen were successful in preventing the spread. Mount Morris was founded in 1839 as a Methodist institution. It was taken over by the Dunkards as the keystone of their educational system 40 years later. The 202 students will continue their work—possibly using churches of the town for classrooms.

BOND SALES ACTIVE; STOCKS MARK TIME

Offerings of New Capital Issues Are Largest in Three Years.

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—The bond market last week provided a number of developments of more than ordinary interest.

Prices declined irregularly, especially among railroad obligations where a succession of new low levels in individual and in average prices appeared. Nevertheless sharp gains were made in a few issues for special reasons and substantial recoveries developed among others. Notwithstanding the cross-currents in the market flotations of new capital issues during the week reached the highest total in more than three years.

The downward trend was most noticeable among railroad bonds. Indirectly recent flotations of new issues had some unfavorable effect on this group. Dealers who found that their stocks of bonds were somewhat larger than desired decided to liquidate some of their holdings, knowing that the prices of the new issues would be maintained for some time whereas the outlook for rail obligations was uncertain and holdings of the latter were liquidated.

Syndicate Action Felt.

Sharp declines and heavy selling in the new 4¼s of 1961 of the Pennsylvania and the New York Central 4¼s of 2013 occurred on Friday with the termination of syndicate support. A recovery on Saturday was far from sufficient to cancel previous losses in the rails.

Brazilian obligations slumped sharply at the beginning of the week apparently because of fears that interest and sinking fund payments would not be met in the immediate future. This apprehension was soon dispelled and a recovery developed as a result of which some of the bonds showed net gains for the week, although others ended the period lower. Net changes in foreign obligations as a whole were irregularly lower.

Offerings of new bond issues aggregated $296,275,000 for the week, the largest total for such a period since the week ended February 4, 1927, when the weekly aggregate was $300,309,000. The previous largest total for 1931 was established in the week of March 14 at $269,103,000, which included the new Pennsylvania and New York Central issues.

More than 50 per cent of the week's financing was for public utility accounts, including $100,000,000 of Pennsylvania Power & Light 4½s and $40,000,000 of 4½s of the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois.

Heavy Industrial Financing.

Industrial financing totaled $81,440,000, the largest total for such issues in about a year. The fact that such a total constitutes a record of a sort is a significant commentary on existing conditions, particularly general business conditions. The $40,000,000 issue of National Steel Corporation 5s and the $30,000,000 of Fox Film debentures were the largest units in this group. As the proceeds of both of these issues are to be used for refunding purposes their flotation reflects further on the business situation.

The sale of $34,975,000 of serial bonds of New York State on Tuesday at an interest cost to the State of 3.4648 per cent, the lowest rate in more than 25 years, demonstrated that the effect of record low money rates is being felt but from the action of second grade corporate and foreign issues it was equally apparent that the preference of investors is still concentrated on the ultra high grade bonds.

Investment bankers expect some slackening in flotation of new issues in the immediate future to permit dealers to distribute recent offerings satisfactorily.

Apart from the rails, fluctuations in domestic corporate issues were narrow but the declines outnumbered the gains. Issues of New York City transit companies jumped on the passage of legislation for the unification of the transit systems of that city.

The week in the stock market was the dullest since the first week of February. For the last three days of the week, the market drifted without significant trend. The price index of 90 issues showed negligible change.

Sharp Movement Likely.

The market is inclined to break out of a trance like that with a sharp movement in one direction or the other. In February, it broke out on the upside. The current stalemate seems due to the fact that there has been so little stock for sale on declines that bears are discouraged, while the prompt loss of the February gains has disheartened the bullish element.

Rail stocks have been a conspicuously heavy group, breaking down to the low level of last December, or recording a double bottom for the bear market. It was notable that the carrier issues seemed to meet support at those levels. However, trading was so dull that the support was not thoroughly tested. Should the rails break through to a new bottom, the Dow theory would suggest that the general list would be dragged lower. If they are successfully supported, however, the speculative fraternity would be greatly encouraged.

Call money on the stock exchange shot up to 2½ per cent on Monday, the highest since the turn of the year. This reflected primarily Government withdrawals of bank balances. Money again renewed on Wednesday at 1½ per cent.

BUSINESS RECOVERY TOPS NORMAL GAIN

Dull Tenor of Markets Are Taken as Symptoms of Seasonal Upturn.

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—The rather dreary tenor of the financial and commodity market during last week has injected more fog into the business outlook, but symptoms have been characteristic of the early and arduous phase of business recovery.

As complete statistics for March appear, it becomes increasingly evident that the seasonal upturn has in many respects exceeded the normal seasonal gains. Of course, the March improvement started from such an extremely low level that it is easy to exaggerate the effects of "greater than seasonal" improvement. Nevertheless, it tends to sustain the theory that the worst has been seen.

Since the first of the month, and the passing of the Easter shopping season, there has naturally been some let-down. Precedent would indicate that further broad improvement can not now be expected until August, although that is not a foregone conclusion. It is too early as yet to judge the implications of the current slackening tendency.

Steel Peak Passed.

The steel industry is usually regarded as the most important of business barometers. The last three weeks would tend to indicate that the spring peak has been passed. Iron Age placed ingot output last week at 53 per cent of capacity, against 57 per cent a fortnight earlier. It is explained, however, that the automobile industry overestimated its March requirements, so that it started April with excessive raw materials. As the month wears on, this excess should be used up, and if spring business is well sustained, the motor makers will be more actively buying steel. Furthermore, there are still several large construction projects for which steel has yet to be ordered.

Although perhaps probable, it is as yet by no means certain the spring peak in steel making has been reached. In 1921, a year comparable in some respects to 1931, the peak was not reached until May. The spring top also came in that month in 1922 and 1927.

Building contracts let in March, as tabulated by F. W. Dodge Corporation, were about 33 per cent above February. Pig iron production picked up about 7½ per cent, while the average upturn is less than 5. Steel ingot output gained nearly 10½ per cent, against an average advance for the period of only 4½ per cent.

Power Decrease Is Less.

Electric power production, as reported for the latest week, showed a smaller than seasonal decrease. The Annalist index was carried up seventenths of a point. Car loadings showed a slight decrease, but it was notable that less than carload lots and miscellaneous freight were higher, and they are better gauges of commercial activity than the total figure.

There has been a rather general sag in commodity prices, although recent fluctuations have been limited to the narrow range that characterizes the bottom of depression.

A bright spot in the commodity situation was a firmer tendency in copper at the end of the week, coincident with publication of March statistics, showing a further working off of stocks. After being offered at 9½ and 9¾ cents, the former figure the lowest in over 30 years, the metal stiffened to 10 cents.

Fresh price slashing appeared in the petroleum industry, but the advancement of what was generally regarded as a constructive program in Washington by the oil States advisory committee lent some encouragement.

CURB SPECULATION AGAIN IN DEADLOCK

Week's Trading Reaches Lightest Volume of Year in Later Sessions.

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—Speculation has again reached a deadlock in the curb market, where the dullness makes the daily fluctuations of small interest.

Trading last week grew increasingly quiet, and in the later sessions approached the lightest volume of the year. Group movements were indistinct, although the market was unsettled and heavy price changes in a majority of issues were inconsequential.

Oils steadied, ceasing their slide into new low ground. Offerings of utilities attained small volume, although in one of the selling movements Electric Bond & Share touched a new minimum for the reaction. Aviation stocks improved, led by Western Air Express, which advanced half a dozen points. Aviation of America and Transcontinental Air Transport also rallied.

Motors were steady. Cord made a new high as Auburn went through another series of gymnastics, although it later reacted. The market heard reports that Cord, which now controls Auburn, might offer fifteen of its own shares for one of the other.

General Theaters Equipment convertible preferred was in supply most of the week coincident with the break in Fox Film and the new financing by that company. Aluminum of America was erratic. Great Atlantic & Pacific responded to the 1930 earnings statement but lost its 14-point rise. Noranda Mines was quiet, notwithstanding the reported opening of new gold veins.

Investment trusts were dull and except for a 3-point break in Insull recorded small changes.

Anaconda Wire Shows Net Income $278,992

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—Profit on manufacturing operations of the Anaconda Wire & Cable Co., a subsidiary of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., for 1930 amounted to $2,345,055 compared with $3,950,657 in 1929.

The net income after deducting all expenses and charges amounted to $278,992. Capital expenditures at the various mills during the year totaled $1,425,943.

Cities Service Company Record Year in 1930

The year 1930 was the most outstanding one in the history of Cities Service Co., according to the twenty-first annual report just mailed to stockholders. The year was marked by record earnings and unprecedented expansion in the organization's activities.

Total assets of the organization on December 31, 1930, amounted to $1,282,624,854 as compared with $1,090,227,318 at the end of 1929, an increase of more than $192,000,000 in a single year. Consolidated net earnings of the company and its subsidiaries were $84,882,938, an increase of $15,100,000 over 1929. Consolidated gross earnings were $213,036,007 as compared with $185,551,053 for the previous year. Consolidated current assets of the company and its subsidiaries were $179,797,950, including $73,186,495 in cash.

He attained an excellent record as a student, winning medals in debating and public speaking.

He was admitted to the bar of Maryland, District of Columbia and to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. As a partner of his stepfather he practiced before the United States Court of Claims.

Mulrooney Spurs New York Inquiry

Commissioner Turns Vice Squad Upside Down in Latest Move.

New York, April 12 (U.P.).—New York, shaken as it has not been since the days of Boss Tweed by almost unbelievable charges of graft, corruption, vice and mismanagement of its civic affairs, looked forward this week to real progress in the effort to purge the municipal government of alleged corruption.

The city was heartened by the most drastic action toward a clean-up yet taken when Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney turned the police vice squad upside down and put the entire personnel of 300 plain clothes men on patrol duty. Their places will be filled by men from other branches of the department, not previously on vice duty.

The commissioner sounded the death knell of the "stool pigeon" and informer system, whereby, evidence disclosed, women were trapped by paid informers and railroaded to prison.

POPULARITY OF TOURNAMENT REVEALED AT BRIDGE GAMES

your tournament if he were with us today."

When Lafayette visited Washington at Mount Vernon they played whist with some of the young people at the mansion, for the distinguished Frenchman was very fond of the game and was considered an excellent player. Even now visitors at Mount Vernon are shown the room in which the whist games were played there and the table that was used. There was always a group of young people at Mount Vernon and they are said to have played a great deal. Most of the games had to be played in the daytime, for card playing is difficult by candlelight, which was then the chief form of illumination after the sun went down.

Cards were purchased in London along with most other luxuries and many necessities, by Washington's agents there, to whom he sent his orders two or three times a year. They were paid for out of the proceeds of the sale of his tobacco in the London market, of which he made many shipments. His diary shows occasions where he played whist with his visitors, and Mount Vernon was never without visitors. Also, his account books record his losses at the game and show that the cards must have run against him.

Will Stimulate Interest.

"Washington bridge players greatly need this tournament," said Mrs. A. E. Byrne in discussing the forthcoming event. "It will not only stimulate interest among the thousands here who love the game, but it will unquestionably improve their playing. The experience we get in coming in contact at the bridge table with persons with whom we have never played before is highly beneficial, for even the best players are constantly finding that they can learn something more about the game and improve their play.

"Those who limit their playing merely to their own little circle of friends do not have the breadth of understanding of the principles and technique of bridge that is to be had in tournament events. For this reason those who realize that they do not play an expert game should take advantage of this grand opportunity to acquire greater skill. Besides the knowledge that will be gained, I am sure that we are going to have a grand social time. Why should we not, meeting and playing with so many pleasant and charming people, and amid such exquisite surroundings as are to be provided at the New Shoreham?"

Instructed Movie Stars.

Mrs. Bryne has played bridge at home and abroad and has been bridge instructor and hostess upon several of the large transatlantic liners. She also spent a season at Hollywood, where she instructed some of the famous stars and producers of the movies. She lists among her pupils some of the screen favorites who are frequently seen in Washington, and declares that with not a few of them it is their chosen form of amusement. Mrs. Byrne will enter some of her local pupils in the tournament.

Mrs. Frank Morrison gave a bridge party of 20 tables on Saturday afternoon in the card parlors of the New Shoreham, and the tournament formed the chief topic of conversation among the players. At the same time another bridge party was in progress in another parlor of the Shoreham, where Miss Virginia Patterson was hostess, and all expressed not only interest but enthusiasm over the coming match. Many of those who were guests at each party have filed as entrants in the tournament and consider that the practice had will be helpful in their play in the big event next month.

Two Divisions to Be Made.

It should be borne in mind that there are two events—four in fact—two at contract and two at auction, and that in each of these forms there will be two divisions, one for advanced players and the other for intermediate players. It is by this division that those who do not regard themselves as experts will have opportunity to win a trophy or a prize, as well as those who are more skillful at the game. Entrants will classify themselves in accordance with their desires, the committee only reserving the right, if it is deemed advisable to exercise it, to take some of those who may be too modest about their ability out of the intermediate class and place them with the advanced division. None, however, will be demoted from the advanced class to the intermediate division.

It is only necessary to fill out the blank printed daily in The Post and send it to the Bridge Editor of The Washington Post. Entrants may file in teams, in pairs, or as individuals.

Remember the dates, May 14, 15 and 16, and the place the New Shoreham.

CASH and Marry!

We might go farther and say, "If you are a 'charge it' addict you'd better not marry!" Surely that insidious habit of deferring payment—of paying tomorrow for what you eat today—is as responsible for wrecking marital sailings as any other one cause.

Still there is some cause for rejoicing. Today there is far less "charging it" than there was a few years ago. Today there are far fewer conjugal scenes, with Papa tearing his hair and Mama weeping silently, over the monthly bill from the grocer's or butcher's.

The reason for this salutary state of affairs is this: fashions in ladies have changed. It used to be smart to be stupid. Now it's smart to be intelligent.

The fashionable woman of today is a keen, shrewd buyer. She can drive as good a bargain in buying groceries as her husband can in buying securities. She runs her household on a competent cash basis. Nine out of ten times—she is an A & P customer!

State School Head Hits Fund Measure

Cook Opposes Proposal to Refuse Association Members Money.

Charleston, W. Va., April 12 (A.P.).—A proposal submitted to the West Virginia Legislature to withhold funds from State educational institutions having membership in the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges has been attacked by W. C. Cook, State superintendent of schools.

Mr. Cook's comment is to the effect that if members of the Legislature are aware of the importance of the association they will eliminate the measure, a rider to the pending budget bill. The budget bill already has passed the Senate, which sent it to the House Saturday.

Ninety of 244 high schools in the State are members of the association. Five colleges, including West Virginia University, also hold membership.

GRAND-DAD didn't have to tell his transportation that Spring was here. The first note of the robin, the first sprouts of fresh green grass, were all that one horse-power job needed.

It's a long way from grand-pa's buggy to yours. But robins, tulips and green grass don't affect your car in the least even though the specifications do say it's worth a whole herd of horses. If you want your car to act like "Spring is here" you'll have to do something about it.

And that's easy. A good Spring-cleaning with an AMOCO Motor Cleaning Machine to take away the Winter's accumulation of dirt and sludge. A crank case filled to the brim of clean, fresh, dependable AMOCO MOTOR OIL of the proper grade. Clean grease of the correct grade in the transmission and differential. Fresh oil and grease in the other vital parts of your car.

And a tank filled to the top with AMOCO-GAS. That's all you need.

Drive into any AMOCO station where oiling and greasing facilities are available. Tell the attendant that you want your car to know that Spring is here. He'll know what you mean and will use the proper grades of oil and greases.

Your car will gallop away with the eagerness of a two-year-old--ready for Spring and for the long drives ahead. The American Oil Company. General Offices: American Bldg., Baltimore.

CROWDED WASHINGTON.

This will be a busy week for President Hoover and everybody. The Red Cross holds its annual meeting, Pan-American Day is to be celebrated tomorrow, Tuskegee Institute is to receive a message, the baseball season and the cherry blossoms are to open together, women enthusiastic for repeal are to follow up enthusiastic drys, the League of Women Voters and the Soroptimists will add to the blossom show, the Daughters of Founders and Patriots will wave the flag, and finally the American Society of Newspaper Editors will tell President Hoover how to run the country.

In the meantime other delegations are pouring into Washington, notably the Daughters of the American Revolution. Tens of thousands of plain citizens accompanied by their anything but plain wives and sweethearts have come by automobile to "view the manners of the town, peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings." The Capital is blushing its freshest green in recognition of the honor accorded to it by these visitations. It welcomes all as to their own home. It is the city of Americans—their city, planned by Gen. Washington for them for all time. If the visitors wish to post up on city planning, let them study George Washington's work as a city planner. They will not find its equal in this world.

Splendid new buildings are rising, to house the Government's many branches. Not one of them is big enough, although all are big. It seems to be impossible for any American except George Washington to grasp the fact that the United States is eternal, and that proper provision for future growth requires immense audacity and breadth of view in building. Public buildings should be designed for the needs of 50 years hence, at least, and a 100-year perspective would be still better. The Capital's public buildings have been mostly makeshifts, seemingly set up with the idea that the United States would be going out of business within a few years. The new series of buildings is more broadly planned, but not broadly enough if normal national growth is considered—and does any one expect the national growth to cease?

Visiting automobiles and street crowds add to the congestion that is now a fixture of Washington traffic. The streets and avenues are wide, but not wide enough. The City of Magnificent Distances, although it is far ahead of other cities in possessing the noble thoroughfares designed by Washington, is crowded. It is not a disparagement of Gen. Washington's vision to note that he could not imagine the congestion that would result from automobiles. Probably if he were here to deal with the problem he would suggest that 18-foot cars carrying one or two persons are an extravagant consumption of space. He might observe that the avenues are as wide as they should be for a city of 2,000,000 individuals, and that a mass movement of vehicular traffic should be devised instead of giving extravagant room to individuals.

But the crowds are happy and on holiday, the April air is sweet, the magic of spring is touching trees and parks with beauty, and the Government at Washington commands loyalty and affection. All's well!

INVESTIGATING MOTOR TRANSPORT.

The expansion and improvement of rail transportation throughout the United States took place so gradually over long periods that regulatory measures were evolved normally and in due season. Motor transport has come suddenly, and regulation lags behind.

Private automobiles, buses and freight trucks have made great inroads upon railroad business; to such an extent, indeed, that appeals have come from all sections demanding relief from what is termed unfair competition. The railroads are astute enough to know that modern motor transport can not be eliminated as competitor; that the advantages it offers the way of quick deliveries in small units from door to door can not be matched by rail freight service.

What the railroads do ask and what with equal insistence private travelers and all highway users urge, is that public freight and passenger vehicles be brought under more stringent and uniform control. The giant trucks and buses that crowd narrow roads at undue speed are a menace to safety as well as a threat to the existence of other methods of transportation.

Freight and passenger service by rail meets competition that has been put to no great outlay for track and right of way. Since motors utilize the highways provided by public funds, the railways insist upon bringing them under a just measure of regulation so that the two carrier agencies shall compete on equal terms.

Private investigation of this big question is under way, but independent evidence is needed to determine what legislation is required. Naturally both rail and motor transport interests are quick to champion their respective claims. A comprehensive survey is now under way by the Transportation Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, and studies are being made in various sections by the Bureau of Public Roads and the Department of Agriculture, in conjunction with the Department of Commerce.

These agencies will go into all the factors of highway transport. Information will be compiled throughout the United States regarding the effectiveness and magnitude of motor trucking and its relation to other means of transportation. This information will be available to Congress committees in charge of bills proposing regulation of interstate transportation.

LESS WORK, LESS PAY.

Agitation for a five-day week in industry has been stirred up by the depression. Labor organizations consider the present time as especially propitious for shortening of the working week, because it would give employment to many now out of work.

It is interesting to note, however, that industry and labor are approaching the problem from entirely different angles. For the most part industries that have been limiting their employes to five days of work are doing so in order to cut down expenses during a slack period. It may be assumed that most industries which have changed to the five-day schedule are paying only five days' wages at the former rate. Under these circumstances working men lose one-sixth of their former weekly wage, and their standard of living is correspondingly reduced.

On the other hand, organized labor is advocating the five-day week with six days' pay and without longer hours on working days. Under this rule the working man would have additional leisure without the necessity of reducing his standard of living. Most working men will agree that if shorter hours mean less pay, they are a detriment rather than a benefit.

This discrepancy between the motives of industry and labor in seeking a shorter working week serves to illustrate one fallacy in the five-day week propaganda that is usually overlooked. A shorter working week reduces the productive capacity of the individual. If an employer can afford to pay a man $50 for five days' work, he can afford to pay him $60 for six days. But he will not pay $60 for five days' work.

The real question which is involved in the five-day week is whether American working men want more leisure or more wages. If they accept an extra day of leisure they must forego the increase in wages that would otherwise be possible. So far as this period of depression is concerned, the general welfare could best be served if employment were distributed among the entire working population, even if a man worked only five days a week. But it is very evident that workmen who are shifting to the five-day week are doing so at a sacrifice of individual income. Organized labor ought to consider carefully whether increased leisure is worth what it would cost in the way of a lower standard of living.

SUBSTITUTES FOR TRUTH.

Dr. Frederick J. Libby, the pacifist lobbyist, whose activities against national defense have brought him wide notoriety, has excelled himself in a late bulletin of the National Council for Prevention of War. He is always expert in avoiding facts, but his last article reveals that he has become an adept also in inventing substitutes for facts. Under the heading, "Our Relations With Russia Endanger Peace," he says:

> I have watched for some time the anti-Russian propaganda that has been flowing through the press of the world and with growing concern. For this drive is international and evidently is internationally directed.

As an old hand in directing propaganda "drives," Dr. Libby ought to be able to recognize one, but he succeeds in avoiding recognition of the fact that it is Russia, and not its intended victims, that is carrying on propaganda. He pities the poor atheists of Russia, who are attacked by churchmen in other countries:

> The London Morning Post suddenly discovered one day that the Communist leaders are atheists and instituted a campaign designed not to convert them but to prod the Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishop Manning, and other princes of the church to denounce them. This wave of zeal, not for religion but against Russia, has not subsided yet.

The anti-Russian "drive" is engineered, then, by the church? Not entirely:

> Then came the drive against "Soviet dumping." Our economists tell us that the "dumping" of goods by Russia in the United States has been relatively negligible—far below the volume of goods "dumped" by the United States in Europe.

Dr. Libby dodges the fact that Russian goods are the product of forced, convict and slave labor, and are therefore sold at less than they would cost if produced by the free manhood of the United States. The protest against Russian "dumping" is because enslaved labor is brought into unfair competition with free American labor. This is a fact that Dr. Libby succeeds in avoiding.

> The Fish commission has generally been recognized as a third form of propaganda . . . The Fish commission may fairly be charged with having added materially to the hate for Russia.

This commission was created by Congress and made a report to Congress which is ingeniously described by Dr. Libby as part of an internationally directed anti-Soviet "drive." He is almost as elusive as the Moscow reds in avoiding a collision with the facts revealed in the report.

> The atrocity stories, on which the war against Germany was fought, have been duplicated against Russia.

Americans will be surprised to learn that the United States fought Germany because of atrocity stories. It is only because of Dr. Libby's astonishing skill in making fiction masquerade as fact that this idea would ever enter their heads.

Dr. Libby winds up his article by strongly hinting that it is the duty of the United States to recognize the Soviet government. Upon his presentation it is clear that the United States is not fit to associate with Russia. Why does he insult the poor atheist victims of the international propaganda drive by suggesting that they should fraternize with Americans, who are so wicked as to believe in God and the freedom of labor?

SOVIET COTTON.

Cotton producers of the United States have been heartily in favor of trading with Soviet Russia. They built up a lucrative trade with the reds. In 1927 the Soviet government bought 475,000 bales at a cost of nearly $40,000,000. Cotton producers could not understand the logic of those who considered trade with the Communists a menace to American industry.

But the cotton trade boom in Russia has been deflated. Last year the United States sold Russia only 81,000 bales for $7,341,000, and the Soviet began dumping cotton on the world market. This year the Russians plan to increase their output of cotton by 30 per cent. Russia will become a cotton-exporting country in competition with the United States. The Soviet monopoly is now selling cotton on the world market for less than the American product brings, in spite of the abnormally low price of that commodity.

Cotton producers now begin to talk about the menace of communism. They have not only lost their Russian market, but they see the world market demoralized by Soviet dumping. American industries have been selling the Soviet large quantities of textile machinery. Within a few years textiles may become an important item in the dumping program. It is true that Russia will need all the cotton she can produce and all the cloth she can manufacture for domestic consumption, but the dictatorship does not believe in keeping goods at home. Everything above the bare necessities of life is shipped abroad to obtain funds and supplies to build up the dictatorship.

The fate of the cotton trade is typical of what is in store for other American interests that see no objection to outfitting the reds. Like blind children, they must be burned before they will recognize the fire.

Dr. Himwich finds that rage and fear are great fat reducers. In this age of heavy traffic corpulence ought to be entirely overcome.

THE EARTH'S INTERIOR

From the New York Times.

One of science's most profound mysteries concerns the interior of the earth. Although men of research have succeeded in adding much to our store of knowledge in other fields of science, their attempts to pierce the veil of secrecy that shrouds the problem of the earth's interior have not been very fruitful.

One of the recent projects proposed to find out more about the earth's interior is that of a deep shaft to be sunk several miles straight down into the bowels of the earth. Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, who proposed this idea, believes that the method will help to throw new light on such questions as to what lies inside the earth, the origin of the planet, new sources of power and how to curb volcanoes and earthquakes.

Several noted engineers have indorsed Dr. Shapley's idea. The Harvard astronomer would build his first shaft inside the earth to a depth of about three miles. This would cost approximately $10,000,000, it is estimated. Two of the world's leading engineers, Sir Charles A. Parsons, former president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and John L. Hodgson, who have considered the subject of underground laboratories for science, see in the project no obstacles that modern engineering can not solve.

Sir Charles goes so far as to suggest the advisability of building a shaft of twelve miles into the earth at an estimated cost of $25,000,000. Mr. Hodgson has suggested that it may be practical to descend to thirty miles. Both eminent men say that no matter how great the cost of subterranean laboratories the expense is justified. They contend that we know nothing of what is inside the earth but that we ought to and the only way to find out is to go down into the interior and see.

What we know of the earth by direct observation is confined almost entirely to its surface. The greatest depth to which man has ever been able to penetrate compares with the size of the globe only as the skin of an apple does to the body of the fruit itself. Several oil wells and coal mines represent at the moment the deepest man has descended. But whereas the earth is thousands of miles thick, the deepest mine in the world is less than two miles deep.

Probably the greatest difficulty facing man in any attempt to wrest from our planet some of the secrets which lie in its interior is the tremendous heat which rages day and night beneath the earth's crust. The deeper we descend into the bowels of the earth the hotter it gets, as any miner can testify. Although this rate of increase differs in different parts of the earth, the general increase in temperature has been computed at about one degree of Fahrenheit to every fifty or sixty feet.

At this rate of increase the earth's interior at a depth of less than fifteen miles would be boiling hot. No metal that we know of could resist the terrific temperatures. This tremendous heat has led many geologists to the conclusion that the interior of the earth must be in a continual molten state. The theory has been advanced that the earth may be likened to a globe, consisting of the large part of melted, shifting iron, covered with a thin cool crust, on which we human beings live.

A contrary point of view has lately come in vogue, which considered the molten interior theory as baseless. The geologists who believe that the molten interior explanation is inaccurate contend that the interior is solid and not molten. The earth's interior is kept in a solid state, they hold, by the tremendous pressure placed on the interior. They point out that while the heat of the interior increases the farther down we go, so does the pressure and the one compensates for the other, with the result that the material inside the earth is kept in its natural solid state.

With the adjournment of Congress President Hoover advocated a political vacation, but since no one will stop talking, he is going to dip in with a little contribution of ten speeches himself. He's not tongue-tied!

The New York Jefferson dinner, carefully side-stepped by Smith, Roosevelt and Walker, emphasized the fact that the political "argument" requiring least cerebral effort on the part of the "outs" is to charge the "ins" with not having passed laws to cure all the world-wide economic ills.

In addition to the arrival of Japanese princes and cherry blossoms this week Washington is going to welcome more kinds of male and female committees, commissions and conventions than it has seen since last spring sprang similar surprises. And the editors are coming!

The First Step in Finding the Right Road Is to Admit You Are on the Wrong One.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MUCH of the woe endured by mortals is a result of plain stubbornness.

I know a man and wife who have been estranged for more than twenty years because neither is willing to "give in."

The man did wrong and would neither repent nor ask forgiveness. The woman was willing to forgive, but only as a reward for repentance.

They call it a matter of principle, but it is nothing more than mulishness. They have ruined their lives and embittered the lives of their children without other reward than the knowledge that they are causing one another to suffer.

Their misery is caused by their stubborn refusal to do the thing that is obviously right.

And that, nine times in ten, is the cause of family feuds and the obstacle in the way of reconciliation.

People related by blood or marriage and people who once were friends do not become estranged because they are ignorant of the right. They know the right thing to do, but lack the bigness of heart to do it.

I have served the estranged in many ways, even to the writing of love letters, and in every case the way of reconciliation appeared so plain and so clear that a child could have found it.

Giving advice in such cases isn't difficult. Always the sensible thing is the right thing and a willingness to do right brings peace.

A wise physician who owns a sanitarium for the treatment of nervous disorders gives more advice than medicine. When his patients leave without giving him their complete confidence, they get little benefit of their treatment. When they open up their hearts and confess the true cause of their "breakdown," a little simple advice often reconciles them to surrender and they go away mended.

There are no people more miserable than those who know what is right and are too stubbornly proud to do it. Their efforts to justify themselves serve only to make them more bitter, and their mental dishonesty costs them both peace and self-respect.

Their case isn't hopeless, however, for a man isn't far from right when he hates himself for being wrong. All they need is a mental adjustment to make them proud of bigness instead of littleness.

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Wheat, Wheat!

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Federal Government owns it; paid half again as much for it as it is worth today; tied up millions of public money in it; filled elevators to overflowing with it; 250,000,000 bushels of wheat. Now nobody knows what to do with it. There are no purchasers in sight. And sale at present prices would involve a loss of nearly $100,000,000. Senator Borah would give it to China, but the Chinese never use wheat flour in any form and couldn't pay the cost of milling and transporting it if they did. Senator Watson would have the Farm Board promise to hold it for three years and pray for a miraculous year of poor crops and high prices to make a market for it. But a quarter of a billion bushels, whenever it is unloaded, will knock the bottom out of wheat prices. The senator's plan would merely postpone that evil day. And in the meantime, storage charges, at the rate of 18 cents per bushel per year, would tie up another $150,000,000 of tax money in hopeless speculation. Senator McNary, therefore, would "let the rats eat it" or "take it out and dump it in the ocean."

Borah in 1932.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

With the exception of Senator Norris, the President has had no more severe critic among leaders who really count, than Senator Borah. The Idaho senator has been at odds with Mr. Hoover ever first one thing and then another ever since Congress was called into special session to frame a tariff revision bill. Nevertheless, in 1932, unless all signs fail, Mr. Borah will be found fighting for the re-election of Mr. Hoover.

But Suppose He Should Run?

Christian Science Monitor.

And now a race horse has been named Coolidge. This may be all very well, but suppose he does not "choose to run?"

Districting and Politics.

Indianapolis News.

The adjournment of Congress in a mood of political unrest has inspired an unusual amount of gossip and left politicians and political writers with the time to thrust politics to the front as one of the topics of the day. Seasoned observers of public affairs will not take the discussion too seriously. They know that many things may happen in a year. They will listen, but they will reserve conclusions until such time as the gossip has settled into more or less established lines and some of the more powerful leaders begin to show evidence of interest.

There is an element in the political vista, however, which is keeping the party organizations on the alert. For the first time in twenty years the States—or most of them—are being redistricted to conform to the mandatory requirements of Congress.

Overproduction of Laws.

Los Angeles Times.

Congress passed 1,524 new laws at its recent session. It might have done worse. During the present century 25,000 Federal enactments have been made. Some 15,000 new statutes found their way into the books the first decade: 3,000 the next ten years, and 6,000 in the period ended 1930. When it comes to keeping the laws of the country, there can be no unemployment. Congressmen have to have something to show for their $10,000 a year per capita.

Primary Is a Farce.

Windom (Minn.) Reporter.

Here is another point in which this paper is in full accord with Al Smith, the late Democratic candidate for President and the potential candidate in 1932. Smith says that the present primary election system is a farce, "has not lived up to the expectations of its friends." He holds that party responsibility is an essential factor in our form of government.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Women in Politics—Prospect of a Third Party if Crime Becomes Worse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note with lively interest that 21 women comprising the National Commission of Women for Law Enforcement have drafted a report on prohibition as a "supplement" to the Wickersham report, with a view to its consideration by President Hoover.

Raskobians may "crack" jokes about this volunteer offer of female opinion, or opinions, on dry-law enforcement, but I think it is quite proper and needful that a survey from the women's viewpoint should be submitted to the Chief Executive and spread before the country.

As yet we have had no definite demonstration of the good that was to result from woman's participation as a special factor in public affairs. Here is a question of civic betterment for the study of which she is specially qualified inasmuch as it is intimately connected with home life and the future of American citizenship.

One of the arguments in favor of votes for women was that they might remedy defects in the governmental management of mere man by adding thereto the methods of the competent housewife. Dust and cobwebs in neglected corners would have to go. The women would be less inclined to compromise and much more meticulous in the matter of civic house cleaning. This idea is not at all far-fetched, and I see no reason to think that in the present instance we will derive anything but good from the point-device scrutiny of feminine publicists—from their determination to remove the dirt of intemperance from behind the ears of the body politic.

Of more significance than the ordinary observer is likely to understand is the fact that in the women's law-enforcement report Mrs. Clement L. Shaver, wife of the former chairman of the Democratic national committee, outlines the feminine stand upon the question of a third party in 1932.

It is possible but not very probable that there will be a third party so soon. But in the light of present political manifestations it does not seem like a wild guess that in the course of a few years it is bound to come. When it comes it will to a great extent be controlled by women, and only through the medium of such a party can the regenerating influence of the so-called weaker sex find expression. Should lawlessness continue uncurbed and increasing as it has for the past ten years, a third party, composed of the best citizens of the two so-called great parties, including both sexes, will be necessary in order to insure life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in the Federal household and make the United States of America safe for democracy.

Communistic Propaganda Alleged at Howard University.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago I wrote you concerning your editorial on birth control. On the morning of April 1 you had another splendid editorial on communism. I hope that The Washington Post keeps up this good work.

Your editorial on communism is more or less in the abstract, in that it covers a general condition. Why not give us something on a concrete case; for instance, the situation at Howard University? If headway is to be made against communism as a condition, you can not get away from treating concrete examples. This Howard University case is an excellent case to work on. B. B. F.

Here's An Opportunity for Bird Sharps to Answer Puzzling Questions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Following are some questions that I would like some prominent ornithologist to answer: Does a bee martin buzz? Does a brown thrasher thrash? Does a flycatcher catch flies; is a cardinal sectarian? Does a gnatcatcher catch gnats? Does a catbird purr? Is a titmouse fond of cheese? Does a yellowhammer hammer? Does a cowbird like milk? How much is a goldfinch worth? Does a tern turn? Does a yellow-breasted chat talk? Does a kingfisher fish? Last, but not least, why are starlings?

THE VANISHED OLD WAYS.

When mother shakes her head and sighs
At something which they do or say,
I whisper: "Come, let us be wise,
Remember they are young today!

"When we were young, 'tis very true,
Such dreadful stuff we didn't know,
Such dreadful things we didn't do!
But that was, oh, so long ago!

"Get down the pictures from the shelf
When you were prim, pigtailed and fat
And I wore earmuffs. Ask yourself
If now you'd have them look like that.

"Oh, we were very proper then
And wore what children ought to wear;
But would you like to braid again
So very tightly Janet's hair?

"Let us not fret about their speech,
Nor sigh for customs changed and gone;
But let us do our best to teach
The truths of Nineteen-Thirty-One."

pelled," she said. "The foreign office spokesman told me the article as a whole was not offensive, but the anecdote concerning Stalin could not be permitted to pass without retaliation.

"We were asked to leave Russia as soon as possible. We were not treated rudely on the way but on the contrary our exit was expedited with every courtesy."

Mr. Grady, who recently completed a survey of the Russian coal situation and designed a model American anthracite mine for the Soviets, said no hard coal was used all winter in Russia, the entire output being hoarded for export.

He declared the Soviets expect to capture all of England's foreign markets for anthracite this year and also to compete successfully with American anthracite in American markets.

Unskilled U. S. Workmen Banned in Soviet Plants

Moscow, April 12 (A.P.).—Unskilled workers from America and other countries who plan to come to Russia on tourist tickets in expectation of finding jobs are likely to be disappointed, in view of instructions issued by the government. Administrative departments, factories and other five-year-plan projects have been told not to give employment to such visitors.

Ordinary tourists visiting the Soviet Union on tickets of the tourist bureau will be welcomed, the statement said, and made as comfortable as conditions permit. However, unless they are engineers or skilled technicians, they must leave at the conclusion of the brief time allotted.

A number of Americans already have arrived in this counrty in search of jobs. Some are short of funds, but all have return tickets home, since this is required of tourists. Many sleep in hallways and bathrooms because of shortage of hotel accommodations. Engineers and skilled technicians brought here under government contract, however, are provided with rooms.

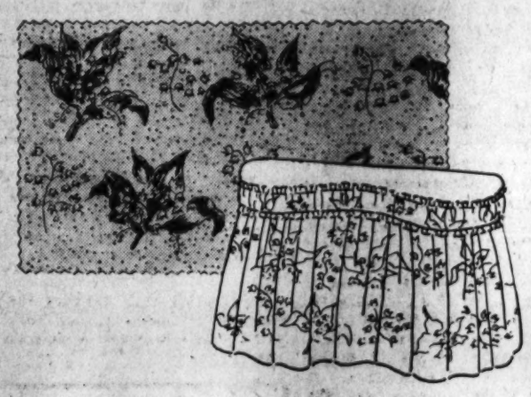
These Are the Spring 1931 Ways to Use Waverley Fabrics

—and tomorrow—Miss Miller, a well-known interior stylist and representative of Waverley Fabrics, will be here in person to tell you about individuality in home interiors and how to use Waverley Fabrics in other ways, equally as smart as those shown here.

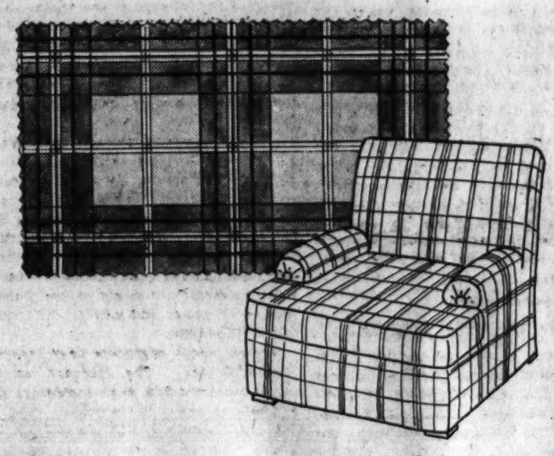
Miss Miller's visit is an important part of the Spring Home Furnishing Style Show here this week, and her talks, tomorrow and Wednesday at 3 P. M., will be illustrated with actual draperies made from the smartest of the new Waverley Fabrics.



"Lilies of the Valley"

The bouquet is placed on a peach color background that repeats the lily clusters in shadowy form. It has a lovely ingenue quality that suggests it for a young girl's room, and the colorings are delightfully appropriate for this purpose. Use it for draperies, dressing table and slip covers. Also in green, pink and blue.

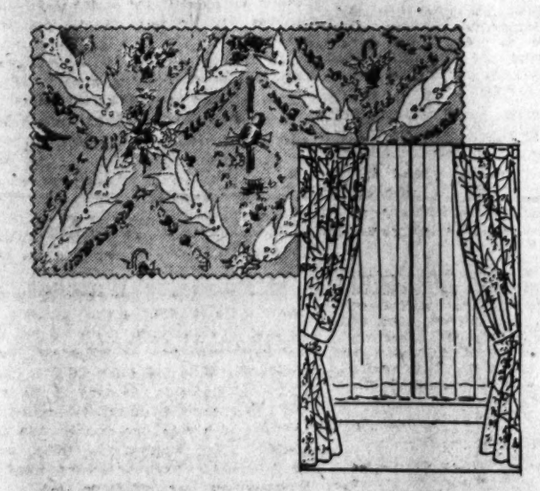
The Yard, 75c



"Plaid"

The bright colors beloved by man and boy are repeated in plaids that are ideal for covering a comfortable chair in the study or in the room a man or boy uses in Summer. Tones of orange, yellow and green are harmoniously combined in these gay plaids.

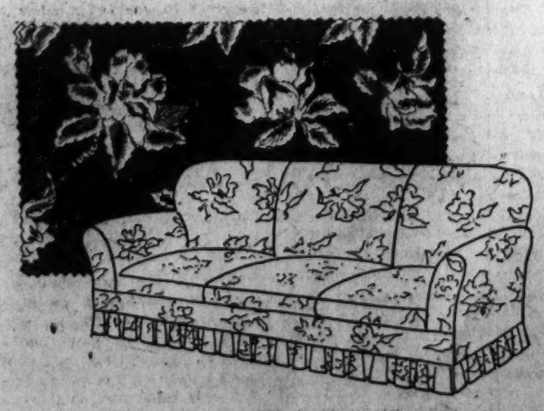
The Yard, $1



"A Glazed Waverley Chintz"

Copied from a hand-woven silk brocade made for Marie Antoinette and now hanging in Fontainebleau. The group of musical instruments, ribbon tied, the rose garlands, the valley lilies arranged to form diamonds, combine to make a design full of exquisite detail—a perfect choice for a bedroom of feminine daintiness or an 18th Century living-room. In green, peach and pale blue.

The Yard, $1



"Magnolia"

This design, taken from an old piece, is so perfectly in keeping with the mood of today that it is strikingly effective in almost any informal room. The colorings are utterly delightful, from the quiet harmonies of the paler grounds, to the almost startling contrast of pure white against black. Of percale, with a glaze that adds brightness without stiffness—an out-of-the-ordinary drapery fabric. Black, egg plant and green backgrounds.

CROWDED WASHINGTON.

This will be a busy week for President Hoover and everybody. The Red Cross holds its annual meeting, Pan-American Day is to be celebrated tomorrow, Tuskegee Institute is to receive a message, the baseball season and the cherry blossoms are to open together, women enthusiastic for repeal are to follow up enthusiastic drys, the League of Women Voters and the Soroptimists will add to the blossom show, the Daughters of Founders and Patriots will wave the flag, and finally the American Society of Newspaper Editors will tell President Hoover how to run the country.

In the meantime other delegations are pouring into Washington, notably the Daughters of the American Revolution. Tens of thousands of plain citizens accompanied by their anything but plain wives and sweethearts have come by automobile to "view the manners of the town, peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings." The Capital is blushing its freshest green in recognition of the honor accorded to it by these visitations. It welcomes all as to their own home. It is the city of Americans—their city, planned by Gen. Washington for them for all time. If the visitors wish to post up on city planning, let them study George Washington's work as a city planner. They will not find its equal in this world.

Splendid new buildings are rising, to house the Government's many branches. Not one of them is big enough, although all are big. It seems to be impossible for any American except George Washington to grasp the fact that the United States is eternal, and that proper provision for future growth requires immense audacity and breadth of view in building. Public buildings should be designed for the needs of 50 years hence, at least, and a 100-year perspective would be still better. The Capital's public buildings have been mostly makeshifts, seemingly set up with the idea that the United States would be going out of business within a few years. The new series of buildings is more broadly planned, but not broadly enough if normal national growth is considered—and does any one expect the national growth to cease?

Visiting automobiles and street crowds add to the congestion that is now a fixture of Washington traffic. The streets and avenues are wide, but not wide enough. The City of Magnificent Distances, although it is far ahead of other cities in possessing the noble thoroughfares designed by Washington, is crowded. It is not a disparagement of Gen. Washington's vision to note that he could not imagine the congestion that would result from automobiles. Probably if he were here to deal with the problem he would suggest that 18-foot cars carrying one or two persons are an extravagant consumption of space. He might observe that the avenues are as wide as they should be for a city of 2,000,000 individuals, and that a mass movement of vehicular traffic should be devised instead of giving extravagant room to individuals.

But the crowds are happy and on holiday, the April air is sweet, the magic of spring is touching trees and parks with beauty, and the Government at Washington commands loyalty and affection. All's well!

INVESTIGATING MOTOR TRANSPORT.

The expansion and improvement of rail transportation throughout the United States took place so gradually over long periods that regulatory measures were evolved normally and in due season. Motor transport has come suddenly, and regulation lags behind.

Private automobiles, buses and freight trucks have made great inroads upon railroad business; to such an extent, indeed, that appeals have come from all sections demanding relief from what is termed unfair competition. The railroads are astute enough to know that modern motor transport can not be eliminated as competitor; that the advantages it offers the way of quick deliveries in small units from door to door can not be matched by rail freight service.

What the railroads do ask and what with equal insistence private travelers and all highway users urge, is that public freight and passenger vehicles be brought under more stringent and uniform control. The giant trucks and buses that crowd narrow roads at undue speed are a menace to safety as well as a threat to the existence of other methods of transportation.

Freight and passenger service by rail meets competition that has been put to no great outlay for track and right of way. Since motors utilize the highways provided by public funds, the railways insist upon bringing them under a just measure of regulation so that the two carrier agencies shall compete on equal terms.

Private investigation of this big question is under way, but independent evidence is needed to determine what legislation is required. Naturally both rail and motor transport interests are quick to champion their respective claims. A comprehensive survey is now under way by the Transportation Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of the Department of Commerce, and studies are being made in various sections by the Bureau of Public Roads and the Department of Agriculture, in conjunction with the Department of Commerce.

These agencies will go into all the factors of highway transport. Information will be compiled throughout the United States regarding the effectiveness and magnitude of motor trucking and its relation to other means of transportation. This information will be available to Congress committees in charge of bills proposing regulation of interstate transportation.

LESS WORK, LESS PAY.

Agitation for a five-day week in industry has been stirred up by the depression. Labor organizations consider the present time as especially propitious for shortening of the working week, because it would give employment to many now out of work.

It is interesting to note, however, that industry and labor are approaching the problem from entirely different angles. For the most part industries that have been limiting their employes to five days of work are doing so in order to cut down expenses during a slack period. It may be assumed that most industries which have changed to the five-day schedule are paying only five days' wages at the former rate. Under these circumstances working men lose one-sixth of their former weekly wage, and their standard of living is correspondingly reduced.

On the other hand, organized labor is advocating the five-day week with six days' pay and without longer hours on working days. Under this rule the working man would have additional leisure without the necessity of reducing his standard of living. Most working men will agree that if shorter hours mean less pay, they are a detriment rather than a benefit.

This discrepancy between the motives of industry and labor in seeking a shorter working week serves to illustrate one fallacy in the five-day week propaganda that is usually overlooked. A shorter working week reduces the productive capacity of the individual. If an employer can afford to pay a man $50 for five days' work, he can afford to pay him $60 for six days. But he will not pay $60 for five days' work.

The real question which is involved in the five-day week is whether American working men want more leisure or more wages. If they accept an extra day of leisure they must forego the increase in wages that would otherwise be possible. So far as this period of depression is concerned, the general welfare could best be served if employment were distributed among the entire working population, even if a man worked only five days a week. But it is very evident that workmen who are shifting to the five-day week are doing so at a sacrifice of individual income. Organized labor ought to consider carefully whether increased leisure is worth what it would cost in the way of a lower standard of living.

SUBSTITUTES FOR TRUTH.

Dr. Frederick J. Libby, the pacifist lobbyist, whose activities against national defense have brought him wide notoriety, has excelled himself in a late bulletin of the National Council for Prevention of War. He is always expert in avoiding facts, but his last article reveals that he has become an adept also in inventing substitutes for facts. Under the heading, "Our Relations With Russia Endanger Peace," he says:

> I have watched for some time the anti-Russian propaganda that has been flowing through the press of the world and with growing concern. For this drive is international and evidently is internationally directed.

As an old hand in directing propaganda "drives," Dr. Libby ought to be able to recognize one, but he succeeds in avoiding recognition of the fact that it is Russia, and not its intended victims, that is carrying on propaganda. He pities the poor atheists of Russia, who are attacked by churchmen in other countries:

> The London Morning Post suddenly discovered one day that the Communist leaders are atheists and instituted a campaign designed not to convert them but to prod the Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishop Manning, and other princes of the church to denounce them. This wave of zeal, not for religion but against Russia, has not subsided yet.

The anti-Russian "drive" is engineered, then, by the church? Not entirely:

> Then came the drive against "Soviet dumping." Our economists tell us that the "dumping" of goods by Russia in the United States has been relatively negligible—far below the volume of goods "dumped" by the United States in Europe.

Dr. Libby dodges the fact that Russian goods are the product of forced, convict and slave labor, and are therefore sold at less than they would cost if produced by the free manhood of the United States. The protest against Russian "dumping" is because enslaved labor is brought into unfair competition with free American labor. This is a fact that Dr. Libby succeeds in avoiding.

> The Fish commission has generally been recognized as a third form of propaganda . . . The Fish commission may fairly be charged with having added materially to the hate for Russia.

This commission was created by Congress and made a report to Congress which is ingeniously described by Dr. Libby as part of an internationally directed anti-Soviet "drive." He is almost as elusive as the Moscow reds in avoiding a collision with the facts revealed in the report.

> The atrocity stories, on which the war against Germany was fought, have been duplicated against Russia.

Americans will be surprised to learn that the United States fought Germany because of atrocity stories. It is only because of Dr. Libby's astonishing skill in mixing fiction masquerade as fact that this idea would ever enter their heads.

Dr. Libby winds up his article by strongly hinting that it is the duty of the United States to recognize the Soviet government. Upon his presentation it is clear that the United States is not fit to associate with Russia. Why does he insult the poor atheist victims of the international propaganda drive by suggesting that they should fraternize with Americans, who are so wicked as to believe in God and the freedom of labor?

SOVIET COTTON.

Cotton producers of the United States have been heartily in favor of trading with Soviet Russia. They built up a lucrative trade with the reds. In 1927 the Soviet government bought 475,000 bales at a cost of nearly $40,000,000. Cotton producers could not understand the logic of those who considered trade with the Communists a menace to American industry.

But the cotton trade boom in Russia has been deflated. Last year the United States sold Russia only 81,000 bales for $7,341,000, and the Soviet began dumping cotton on the world market. This year the Russians plan to increase their output of cotton by 80 per cent. Russia will become a cotton-exporting country in competition with the United States. The Soviet monopoly is now selling cotton on the world market for less than the American product brings, in spite of the abnormally low price of that commodity.

Cotton producers now begin to talk about the menace of communism. They have not only lost their Russian market, but they see the world market demoralized by Soviet dumping. American industries have been selling the Soviet large quantities of textile machinery. Within a few years textiles may become an important item in the dumping program. It is true that Russia will need all the cotton she can produce and all the cloth she can manufacture for domestic consumption, but the dictatorship does not believe in keeping goods at home. Everything above the bare necessities of life is shipped abroad to obtain funds and supplies to build up the dictatorship.

The fate of the cotton trade is typical of what is in store for other American interests that see no objection to outfitting the reds. Like blind children, they must be burned before they will recognize the fire.

Dr. Himwich finds that rage and fear are great fat reducers. In this age of heavy traffic corpulence ought to be entirely overcome.

THE EARTH'S INTERIOR

From the New York Times.

One of science's most profound mysteries concerns the interior of the earth. Although men of research have succeeded in adding much to our store of knowledge in other fields of science, their attempts to pierce the veil of secrecy that shrouds the problem of the earth's interior have not been very fruitful.

One of the recent projects proposed to find out more about the earth's interior is that of a deep shaft to be sunk several miles straight down into the bowels of the earth. Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory, who proposed this idea, believes that the method will help to throw new light on such questions as to what lies inside the earth, the origin of the planet, new sources of power and how to curb volcanoes and earthquakes.

Several noted engineers have indorsed Dr. Shapley's idea. The Harvard astronomer would build his first shaft inside the earth to a depth of about three miles. This would cost approximately $10,000,000, it is estimated. Two of the world's leading engineers, Sir Charles A. Parsons, former president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and John L. Hodgson, who have considered the subject of underground laboratories for science, see in the project no obstacles that modern engineering can not solve.

Sir Charles goes so far as to suggest the advisability of building a shaft of twelve miles into the earth at an estimated cost of $25,000,000. Mr. Hodgson has suggested that it may be practical to descend to thirty miles. Both eminent men say that no matter how great the cost of subterranean laboratories the expense is justified. They contend that we know nothing of what is inside the earth but that we ought to and the only way to find out is to go down into the interior and see.

What we know of the earth by direct observation is confined almost entirely to its surface. The greatest depth to which man has ever been able to penetrate compares with the size of the globe only as the skin of an apple does to the body of the fruit itself. Several oil wells and coal mines represent at the moment the deepest man has descended. But whereas the earth is thousands of miles thick, the deepest mine in the world is less than two miles deep.

Probably the greatest difficulty facing man in any attempt to wrest from our planet some of the secrets which lie in its interior is the tremendous heat which rages day and night beneath the earth's crust. The deeper we descend into the bowels of the earth the hotter it gets, as any miner can testify. Although this rate of increase differs in different parts of the earth, the general increase in temperature has been computed at about one degree of Fahrenheit to every fifty or sixty feet.

At this rate of increase the earth's interior at a depth of less than fifteen miles would be boiling hot. No metal that we know of could resist the terrific temperatures. This tremendous heat has led many geologists to the conclusion that the interior of the earth must be in a continual molten state. The theory has been advanced that the earth may be likened to a globe, consisting of the large part of melted, shifting iron, covered with a thin cool crust, on which we human beings live.

A contrary point of view has lately come in vogue, which considered the molten interior theory as baseless. The geologists who believe that the molten interior explanation is inaccurate contend that the interior is solid and not molten. The earth's interior is kept in a solid state, they hold, by the tremendous pressure placed on the interior. They point out that while the heat of the interior increases the farther down we go, so does the pressure and the one compensates for the other, with the result that the material inside the earth is kept in its natural solid state.

POST HASTE.

With the adjournment of Congress President Hoover advocated a political vacation. But since no one will stop talking, he is going to dip in with a little contribution of ten speeches himself. He's not tongue-tied!

The New York Jefferson dinner, carefully side-stepped by Smith, Roosevelt and Walker, emphasized the fact that the political "argument" requiring least cerebral effort on the part of the "outs" is to charge the "ins" with not having passed laws to cure all the world-wide economic ills.

Answers to correspondents: The cherry blossoms waited until this week for the arrival of the Japanese prince; the white variety bloom later—being double, it takes twice as long for them to open; the trees bear no cherries; yes, they are afraid of little George Washingtons.

Washington meetings demonstrate that women are as divided on politics and prohibition as their new pajama skirts.

Washington's one abortive attempt at daylight saving, when the mistake was made of changing working hours instead of moving the clocks ahead, has robbed her of this great summer benefit ever since.

Many a lone visit from Miss Opportunity is lost because her knock is earlier than the call of the alarm clock.

What a curious experience it will be for those New Yorkers to accompany the Japanese royal visitors to that quaint old place they want to visit on upper Fifth avenue—the Metropolitan Museum!

Mayor Walker said he was "more or less shocked at the reports of framing innocent women." That is more or less a complete diagram of what's the matter with New York.

George Washington's portrait adorns our dollar bills. Since the value of the silver called for by this certificate is now just about 25 cents, George's picture will be put on the new quarters.

Sheriff West knows his Chi. better than the bandits who demand a trifling ransom for a brewer: "If the kidnapers think any of the Blumer family is going to walk down a Chicago street, even in daylight, with $100,000, they're crazy."

The New York Zoo has a new baby camel and doesn't know whether to christen it "Repeal" or "Home Rule." We know one concern that will pay $100,000 to have it named "Humidor Pack" or "Miss Cellophane," as the case may be.

In addition to the arrival of Japanese princes and cherry blossoms this week Washington is going to welcome more kinds of male and female committees, commissions and conventions than it has seen since last spring sprang similar surprises. And the editors are coming!

With what face-saving tact a great news gathering organization covers the return of two young traveling salesmen: "The princes, leaving South America, will have the satisfaction of feeling that what was designed as a strictly commercial mission became a brilliant social excursion."

You can buy an airplane now for less than $1,000, but there are still the problems of upkeep and keeping up.

The First Step in Finding the Right Road Is to Admit You Are on the Wrong One.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

I know a man and wife who have been estranged for more than twenty years because neither is willing to "give in."

The man did wrong and would neither repent nor ask forgiveness. The woman was willing to forgive, but only as a reward for repentance.

They call it a matter of principle, but it is nothing more than mulishness. They have ruined their lives and embittered the lives of their children without other reward than the knowledge that they are causing one another to suffer.

Their misery is caused by their stubborn refusal to do the thing that is obviously right.

And that, nine times in ten, is the cause of family feuds and the obstacle in the way of reconciliation.

People related by blood or marriage and people who once were friends do not become estranged because they are ignorant of the right. They know the right thing to do, but lack the bigness of heart to do it.

I have served the estranged in many ways, even to the writing of love letters, and in every case the way of reconciliation appeared so plain and so clear that a child could have found it.

Giving advice in such cases isn't difficult. Always the sensible thing is the right thing and a willingness to do right brings peace.

A wise physician who owns a sanitarium for the treatment of nervous disorders gives more advice than medicine. When his patients leave without giving him their complete confidence, they get little benefit of their treatment. When they open up their hearts and confess the true cause of their "breakdown," a little simple advice often reconciles them to surrender and they go away mended.

There are no people more miserable than those who know what is right and are too stubbornly proud to do it. Their efforts to justify themselves serve only to make them more bitter, and their mental dishonesty costs them both peace and self-respect.

Their case isn't hopeless, however, for a man isn't far from right when he hates himself for being wrong. All they need is a mental adjustment to make them proud of bigness instead of littleness.

Wheat, Wheat!

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Federal Government owns it; paid half again as much for it as it is worth today; tied up millions of public money in it; filled elevators to overflowing with it; 250,000,000 bushels of wheat. Now nobody knows what to do with it. There are no purchasers in sight. And sale at present prices would involve a loss of nearly $100,000,000. Senator Borah would give it to China, but the Chinese never use wheat flour in any form and couldn't pay the cost of milling and transporting it if they did. Senator Watson would have the Farm Board promise to hold it for three years and pray for a miraculous year of poor crops and high prices to make a market for it. But a quarter of a billion bushels, whenever it is unloaded, will knock the bottom out of wheat prices. The senator's plan would merely postpone that evil day. And in the meantime, storage charges, at the rate of 18 cents per bushel per year, would tie up another $150,000,000 of tax money in hopeless speculation. Senator McNary, therefore, would "let the rats eat it" or "take it out and dump it in the ocean."

Borah in 1932.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

With the exception of Senator Norris, the President has had no more severe critic among leaders who really count, than Senator Borah. The Idaho senator has been at odds with Mr. Hoover ever first one thing and then another ever since Congress was called into special session to frame a tariff revision bill. Nevertheless, in 1932, unless all signs fail, Mr. Borah will be found fighting for the re-election of Mr. Hoover.

But Suppose He Should Run?

Christian Science Monitor.

And now a race horse has been named Coolidge. This may be all very well, but suppose he does not "choose to run?"

Districting and Politics.

Indianapolis News.

The adjournment of Congress in a mood of political unrest has inspired an unusual amount of gossip and left politicians and political writers with the time to thrust politics to the front as one of the topics of the day. Seasoned observers of public affairs will not take the discussion too seriously. They know that many things may happen in a year. They will listen, but they will reserve conclusions until such time as the gossip has settled into more or less established lines and some of the more powerful leaders begin to show evidence of interest.

There is an element in the political vista, however, which is keeping the party organizations on the alert. For the first time in twenty years the States—or most of them—are being redistricted to conform to the mandatory requirements of Congress.

Overproduction of Laws.

Los Angeles Times.

Congress passed 1,524 new laws at its recent session. It might have done worse. During the present century 25,000 Federal enactments have been made. Some 15,000 new statutes found their way into the books the first decade; 3,000 the next ten years, and 6,000 in the period ended 1930. When it comes to keeping the laws of the country, there can be no unemployment. Congressmen have to have something to show for their $10,000 a year per capita.

Primary Is a Farce.

Windom (Minn.) Reporter.

Here is another point in which this paper is in full accord with Al Smith, the late Democratic candidate for President and the potential candidate in 1932. Smith says that the present primary election system is a farce, "has not lived up to the expectations of its friends." He holds that party responsibility is an essential factor in our form of government.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Women in Politics—Prospect of a Third Party If Crime Becomes Worse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note with lively interest that 21 women comprising the National Commission of Women for Law Enforcement have drafted a report on prohibition as a "supplement" to the Wickersham report, with a view to its consideration by President Hoover.

Raskobians may "crack" jokes about this volunteer offer of female opinion, or opinions, on dry-law enforcement, but I think it is quite proper and needful that a survey from the women's viewpoint should be submitted to the Chief Executive and spread before the country.

As yet we have had no definite demonstration of the good that was to result from woman's participation as a special factor in public affairs. Here is a question of civic betterment for the study of which she is specially qualified inasmuch as it is intimately connected with home life and the future of American citizenship.

One of the arguments in favor of votes for women was that they might remedy defects in the governmental management of mere man by adding thereto the methods of the competent housewife. Dust and cobwebs in neglected corners would have to go. The women would be less inclined to compromise and much more meticulous in the matter of civic house cleaning. This idea is not at all far-fetched, and I see no reason to think that in the present instance we will derive anything but good from the point-device scrutiny of feminine publicists—from their determination to remove the dirt of intemperance from behind the ears of the body politic.

Of more significance than the ordinary observer is likely to understand is the fact that in the women's law-enforcement report Mrs. Clement L. Shaver, wife of the former chairman of the Democratic national committee, outlines the feminine stand upon the question of a third party in 1932.

It is possible but not very probable that there will be a third party so soon. But in the light of present political manifestations it does not seem like a wild guess that in the course of a few years it is bound to come. When it comes it will to a great extent be controlled by women, and only through the medium of such a party can the regenerating influence of the so-called weaker sex find expression. Should lawlessness continue uncurbed and increasing as it has for the past ten years, a third party, composed of the best citizens of the two so-called great parties, including both sexes, will be necessary in order to insure life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in the Federal household and make the United States of America safe for democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago I wrote you concerning your editorial on birth control. On the morning of April 1 you had another splendid editorial on communism. I hope that The Washington Post keeps up this good work.

Your editorial on communism is more or less in the abstract, in that it covers a general condition. Why not give us something on a concrete case; for instance, the situation at Howard University? If headway is to be made against communism as a condition, you can not get away from treating concrete examples. This Howard University case is an excellent case to work on.

THE VANISHED OLD WAYS.

When mother shakes her head and sighs
At something which they do or say,
I whisper: "Come, let us be wise,
Remember they are young today!

"When we were young, 'tis very true,
Such dreadful stuff we didn't know,
Such dreadful things we didn't do!
But that was, oh, so long ago!

"Get down the pictures from the shelf
When you were prim, pigtailed and fat
And I wore earmuffs. Ask yourself
If now you'd have them look like that.

"Oh, we were very proper then
And wore what children ought to wear;
But would you like to braid again
So very tightly Janet's hair?

"Let us not fret about their speech,
Nor sigh for customs changed and gone;
But let us do our best to teach
The truths of Nineteen-Thirty-One."

OIL-BURNING PLANE SEEKS NEW RECORD

Ship Powered With Packard Diesel Motors Hops Off on Fuel Test.

Jacksonville Beach, Fla., April 12 (U.P.).—A Bellanca monoplane, powered with Packard Diesel motors and burning oil for fuel, took off here at 8:52 a. m. today in an attempt to break the nonrefueling record of 78 hours.

The flight is sponsored by the Packard Motor Co., of Detroit, and the plane is piloted by Walter Lees, chief test pilot, and Fred Brossy, co-pilot.

The flight was started secretly, but a United Press correspondent learned of the attempt and interviewed Edwin McCauley, son of Allen McCauley, president of the Packard Motor Co., some time after the plane took off.

Mr. McCauley was rather reticent, but agreed to be quoted to the effect that the plane took off at 8:52 a. m., after it had been rolled three-tenths of a mile. A strong wind helped the plane to gain altitude.

It is believed a load of 6,500 gallons of oil was taken aboard.

The test is said to be for the purpose of testing the availability of oil as a fuel, both for its economic and power value.

An attempt of the same kind was made at Jacksonville March 1, but a leaking oil tank forced the plane down.

Dr. R. N. Green, Jacksonville, local representative of the Federated Association, International, placed a barograph aboard the plane and will check the flight.

The sun has shown only intermittently here today and the ceiling is about 2,500 feet. It was predicted it will drop to 1,500 tonight. The plane is flying low and has been in sight mostly since it took off. It is flying within a radius of about 3 miles.

An elaborate system of lights is installed and the plane is dropping messages into the ocean near shore, where they are washed ashore by the waves.

Mr. McCauley is maintaining a continuous watch.

pelled," she said. "The foreign office spokesman told me the article as a whole was not offensive, but the anecdote concerning Stalin could not be permitted to pass without retaliation.

"We were asked to leave Russia as soon as possible. We were not treated rudely on the way but on the contrary our exit was expedited with every courtesy."

Mr. Grady, who recently completed a survey of the Russian coal situation and designed a model American anthracite mine for the Soviets, said no hard coal was used all winter in Russia, the entire output being hoarded for export.

He declared the Soviets expect to capture all of England's foreign markets for anthracite this year and also to compete successfully with American anthracite in American markets.

Unskilled U. S. Workmen Banned in Soviet Plants

Moscow, April 12 (A.P.).—Unskilled workers from America and other countries who plan to come to Russia on tourist tickets in expectation of finding jobs are likely to be disappointed, in view of instructions issued by the government. Administrative departments, factories and other five-year-plan projects have been told not to give employment to such visitors.

Ordinary tourists visiting the Soviet Union on tickets of the tourist bureau will be welcomed, the statement said, and made as comfortable as conditions permit. However, unless they are engineers or skilled technicians, they must leave at the conclusion of the brief time allotted.

A number of Americans already have arrived in this country in search of jobs. Some are short of funds, but all have return tickets home, since this is required of tourists. Many sleep in hallways and bathrooms because of shortage of hotel accommodations. Engineers and skilled technicians brought here under government contract, however, are provided with rooms.

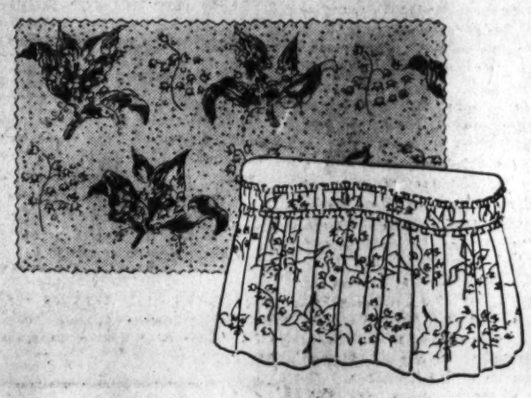
—and tomorrow—Miss Miller, a well-known interior stylist and representative of Waverley Fabrics, will be here in person to tell you about individuality in home interiors and how to use Waverley Fabrics in other ways, equally as smart as those shown here.

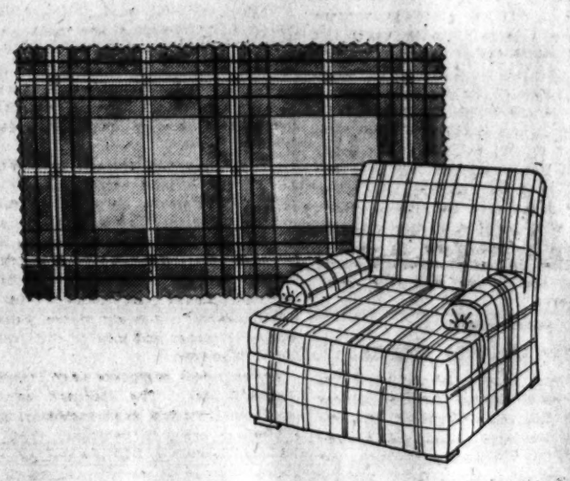
Miss Miller's visit is an important part of the Spring Home Furnishing Style Show here this week, and her talks, tomorrow and Wednesday at 3 P. M., will be illustrated with actual draperies made from the smartest of the new Waverley Fabrics.



"Lilies of the Valley"

The bouquet is placed on a peach color background that repeats the lily clusters in shadowy form. It has a lovely ingenue quality that suggests it for a young girl's room, and the colorings are delightfully appropriate for this purpose. Use it for draperies, dressing table and slip covers. Also in green, pink and blue.

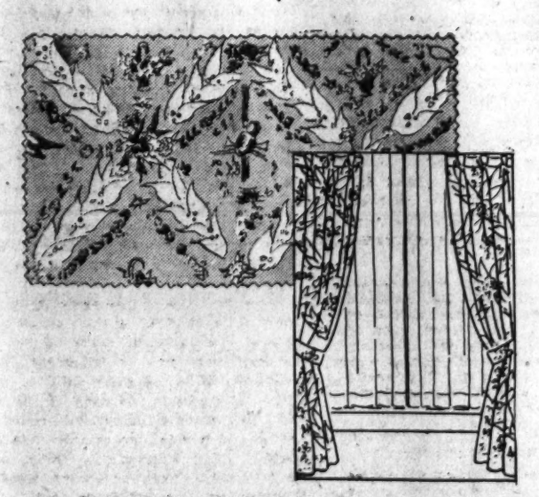
The Yard, 75c



"Plaid"

The bright colors beloved by man and boy are repeated in plaids that are ideal for covering a comfortable chair in the study or in the room a man or boy uses in Summer. Tones of orange, yellow and green are harmoniously combined in these gay plaids.

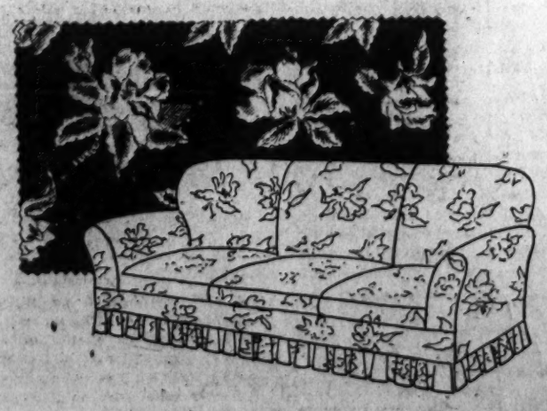
The Yard, $1



"A Glazed Waverley Chintz"

Copied from a hand-woven silk brocade made for Marie Antoinette and now hanging in Fontainebleau. The group of musical instruments, ribbon tied, the rose garlands, the valley lilies arranged to form diamonds, combine to make a design full of exquisite detail—a perfect choice for a bedroom of feminine daintiness or an 18th Century living-room. In green, peach and pale blue.

The Yard, $1



"Magnolia"

This design, taken from an old piece, is so perfectly in keeping with the mood of today that it is strikingly effective in almost any informal room. The colorings are utterly delightful, from the quiet harmonies of the paler grounds, to the almost startling contrast of pure white against black. Of percale, with a glaze that adds brightness without stiffness—an out-of-the-ordinary drapery fabric. Black, egg plant and green backgrounds.

U. S. Diplomat To Head Group At Music Fete

Ambassador Sackett and Attractive Wife to Visit Noted Spa.

THE United States Ambassador to Germany, Mr. Frederic M. Sackett and his attractive wife, who for several years made themselves most popular in Washington during the former's term as U. S. Senator, are busy in Berlin with the social duties attached to their position and are also busy promoting American relations in other parts of the country.

There is at present no country with a keener appreciation of the highest type of art or the best music than the United States, and it is to demonstrate to a Nation famed for centuries for their art and music, the immense artistic progress made in this country that Mr. Sackett has formed a representative committee for the American festival to be held in Bad Homburg from June 22 to June 26 of this summer.

For more than a century Bad Homburg was the favorite continental spa of Europe and was especially patronized by English and Americans. King Edward VII passed every summer there for many years and made the resort a smart gathering place for the distinguished visitors to Europe.

The charming place is set in the picturesque wooded slopes of the Taunus hills within a short driving distance of the Rhine, and the historical castles of Frankfort, Mainz and Darmstadt. The Kurhaus is the center of social activity.

Mr. Sackett will inaugurate the American Festival by a speech which will be followed by an address by Irving Schwerke, music critic, who will give a conference on the development of American music. To illustrate the lecture there will be a program of music played by an orchestra. The second day will be devoted to chamber music, and on the third day a sympohny concert will be held under the direction of a famous American conductor, and American soloists will take part. The entire festival will be broadcast to America, and on the closing day an American opera will be produced at the Kurhaus theater. An exhibition of American art will take place also, followed later in the season, on July 4, by the celebration of Independence Day.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Sackett will be in Bad Homburg throughout the festivities, and will receive Americans and other visitors who attend the interesting and unique performances.

Miss Sally Cary Fairfax Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Washington and Fauquier County, Va., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Charles Ridgely White, at her country home near Baltimore. Miss Harrison made her debut in Washington last season.

Miss Louise Brooks, the daughter of Mr. Walter B. Brooks, jr., and of Mrs. Lionel Atwill, will be one of next season's most prominent debutantes. she will make her debut in Philadelphia, Washington and New York, in all of which cities she will be much entertained. Her stepgrandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, will give a ball for her New Year's Eve at Whitemarsh Hall, their palatial country place near Philadelphia. Miss Brooks, who has been traveling abroad for six months, will return in May and will join her mother.

Wyants to Pass Summer At Greensburg Home.

Representative and Mrs. Adam M. Wyant left yesterday to spend the summer at their home in Greensburg, Pa. Mr. Edmund S. Doty, Mrs. Wyant's brother, accompanied them.

Miss Anne Moore Wyant, a debutante of next winter, has returned to Smith College, where she is a member of the freshman class. Representative and Mrs. Wyant make their home at Wardman Park Hotel, and will return there in the fall.

Capital Plans Pan-American Celebration

Tomorrow's Observance to Include Special Events at Union.

Tomorrow Washington will take part in the celebration of Pan-American Day, which will be observed by the American republics for the first time. The holiday had its origin in the common desire to give visible manifestation of their general friendliness and confidence among these republics.

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, will entertain at a concert of Latin-American music, assisted by the Marine Band that evening, in the great hall of the Pan-American Building. Representatives of the various Latin-American republic here will attend, as will many other officials and members of residential society. The beautiful terraces and the Aztec garden of the building will be thrown open for the guests in an informal reception following the concert.

More than a year ago Minister Juan B. Sacasa, of Nicaragua, suggested that flags of the respective countries be flown at embassies and legations of the respective countries on occasion of the national anniversaries of other American republics as well as their own.

His suggestion was referred for study to a subcommittee of the Pan-American Union governing board, which consisted of the Ambassadors of Brazil and Cuba, and the Minister of Nicaragua. S. Gurgel do Amaral, as Ambassador of Brazil, is said to have advanced the alternative idea of a single Pan-American Day, which was approved by the subcommittee and consequently by the governing board. The latter consists of diplomatic representatives of the republics at Washington and the Secretary of State of the United States. The suggestion found favor throughout the continent and most of the republics hastened to take official cognizance of the new holiday.

President Hoover issued a proclamation proclaiming "Pan-American Day" in this country and ordered the display of the United States flag on Government buildings here. He also invited public celebrations to give expression "to the spirit of continental cordiality and friendly feeling which the Government and people of the United States entertain toward peoples and governments of the other republics of the American continent."

Dr. and Mrs. Earle Willey have gone to Atlantic City where Dr. Willey will recuperate from a recent illness. They were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Ralph F. Henn, of Geneva, Ohio, who has been spending the Easter holidays with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans have left for Atlantic City to be guests at the Haddon Hall for a short stay.

During the dinner, M. Claudel pinned the insignia of Commander of the Legion of Honor on Mr. Smith. The decoration was recently awarded Mr. Smith for his work as president of the French Institute in the United States.

M. Claudel was presented with a replica of Mount Vernon at the Twenty-ninth general assembly of the Federation de L'Alliance Francaise in the United States and Canada at the Plaza Hotel on Saturday, where he presided at the morning session. The replica is fashioned of sugar from architect's specifications.

The presentation was made by the American committee to the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition in Paris, and the cake will be shown there this summer when the exposition opens.

OUT of the Southwest comes the story of the telephone linesman who became an impromptu announcer far out on the plains of Texas. The linesman tapped a line to make a repair, listened over his attachable telephone a minute, then called to the foreman on the ground: "Great gosh! There's music on this darn line!"

Unknowingly the lineman had tapped the wire carrying an NBC program to the Southwestern network and his exclamations were broadcast far and wide to the citizenry of Texas.

Jane Interprets the MODE

Spring suit in black georgette with white georgette and valenciennes lace gillet, the suit all-over decorated in tiny tucks. (Courtesy of Tollmann, Paris.)

Aboard S. S. Ile de France, April 12.

I JUST guess beautiful things can never be useful, and maybe we really don't want them to be, in our heart of hearts. While kid gloves, artificial flowers used for trimming, velvet, and now, peau d'ange—are all enshrined in the feminine heart and the masculine memory as beautiful and fragile.

Does that keep us from wearing 'em? Not a bit! But it is hard on the wardrobe budget, and that I will admit. And in my role as a fashion adviser and friend I am obliged to tell you about the last mentioned, and the most recent of fragilities, peau d'ange.

It's a beautiful, beautiful material which looks for all the world like white suede, the kind that is used for gloves. It has the same purity and whiteness, the same heaviness, which lends itself beautifully to the stateliness of formal evening wear, the same softness of suede. Imagine, then, how it has taken the feminine heart! Only to break it, as beauty always does. For peau d'ange, "angel skin" cloth, is more fragile than the skin of a real angel, not that we have ever skinned one to prove it—but I'll bet you could wear an angel skin more than four or five times, which is the absolute limit to the wearing of a peau d'ange dress!

I hate to admit this, because I love peau d'ange. But having written about this beautiful material largely, I am forced to tell you about its drawbacks as well. Having also had time to find out about its wearing qualities, sadly enough, and having paid for my experience by seeing two beautiful evening gowns go the way of all flesh only more speedily, I speak with authority.

How are you as to house dresses? We weren't so good, so had to get in and design and make a few—house dresses that are suitable for summer resort daytime dresses, you know. For the housewife of today doesn't bother with apron-like affairs that she has to whisk out of sight when the doorbell rings, having discovered that there were certain types of summer sports dresses that could be easily laundered and give her the freedom of movement that a house dress should. If you haven't discovered this yet, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, and see for yourself. House dresses that are the newest style, the most comfortable silhouette, the most practical, and to make yourself!

Tollmann's things are always so quietly! It looks at first like just another suit, the one I have illustrated for you today, doesn't it now? Yet when you look closer and read further, you find that it is black georgette, and worked all over in tiny tucks, which the French call "nerveurs." The one-piece dress is worked in these tucks to make it flatter and fit to the figure, and the upper part of the dress has a vestee effect sewn right to it, of white georgette and valenciennes lace. The jacket is even much more worked as to nerveures in the back, and on the sleeves, as you can see in the sketch. Nice?

Ruffles cut "en forme" are the latest in dressy bags for afternoon and evening, you know—and now an enterprising merchant has made black suede gloves to match the bag. This way of cutting the so-called ruffles, which are flounces, really means that instead of gathering them to the body of the article, bag or glove, they are sewn straight to the material, but cut at the outer edge in a wavy line which is how the edge of the ruffle would actually look if it were ruffled. You can see what I mean by the bag and gloves I drew in the corner, and then you will always know what "en forme" is, applied to ruffles or not.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

FLOWERS FOR CUTTING.

ARE you planning a place in your garden where you mean to grow flowers exclusively for picking? Every garden should have a plot where the owner will feel free to cut all the blossoms wanted without destroying the garden's beauty. Such a plot may be a bit removed from the rest of the garden, but should be near enough to the house so that it will require little effort to cut some flowers for a visitor, or to refill the bowls or vases which seemingly coax a room out into the open in the warmer season of the year.

A cutting garden, if it is to fulfill its real mission, must produce. Therefore it must be in the sun where the loam is rich and well drained. It should be planted with varieties which will bloom from late April until frost.

As some of the earliest blossoms to unfold their petals in the spring are among the shrubs, it is well to plant at least three varieties of spring-flowering shrubs. Forsythia is, in most localities, the first to burst into bloom; in fact, it can be made to bloom in the house in the early part of the month. All that is necessary is to cut off a few branches and bring them into a warm, sunny window. Flowering quince is another shrub that blooms in April. Double pink flowering almond blooms at the same time as the flowering quince.

Every cutting garden should have a few spring-flowering bulbs. Among the best are the various varieties of daffodils, some of the single varieties of tulips and some scilla. All of these bulbs require little care. Lily of the valley, while desirable in most ways, requires shade, so is not fitted for a cutting garden.

Annuals which may be sown where they are to bloom are well suited for the cutting garden of busy people, as they do not have to be transplanted.

Among the best of the annuals from the standpoint of color and the number of blooms produced are zinnias. These plants require a light, rich loam with some leafmold. It pays to buy the best zinnia seed obtainable, for each year the seedmen are offering better strains with larger, finer flowers. The colors of the zinnias are gorgeous and the flowers last for ten days or two weeks. Centaurea, reignonette, verbena and salpiglossis should also be in every cutting garden.

Gladiolus and some of the hardy lilies are very decorative for house use. Hardy chrysanthemums should also be planted for cutting in the fall. Most of the outdoor chrysanthemums last until after the first frost. Calendulas also last until frost. Both of these last-named varieties will even continue to bloom through the first few frosts if they are covered at night with old sheets or heavy canvas.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"ARIES."

IF April 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a. m. to 9:45 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. The one danger period is from 3 p. m. to 5:45 p. m.

Your guiding star will have dim reflections on this date, but "for him who loves and for him who aspires, life may lead through the thorns, but it never stops in the desert." Do not heed pessimistic doubts.

The child born on this April 13 will have a self-willed, defiant nature, and whether these traits of character will be refined into dignity and self-reliance, or debased into arrogance and despotism, is the problem of their possessor's destiny. Although not a lovable child, it will respond quickly to affection, and will be loyal to those who have won its respect and love.

If born on April 13, you are one of those people who are best described by the word "harmonious." People never set your teeth on edge, or rub you up the wrong way. Yet you are not overmeek, unpleasantly amiable, or without firm convictions. Your natural effervescence of spirit cheers, but does not inebriate. Be you man or woman, you are the light of your home. In spite of, and not always because of, external conditions, you manage to be happy, and to find things of interest about you. You have strong likes and dislikes, but you only freely air the former.

You are quick to sense a grain of humor if it can be found in a load of tragedy. Because of your great self-control, you are a good leader or "boss." You take your full share of a burden, and are willing to do more in order to help some one else. You are quite a determined being, but you are diplomatic and win your way through gentle methods. You never cry over a "spill," but are more careful next time.

You are only moderately ambitious, and you prefer comfort to power and contented obscurity to fame. You will not have many intimate friends, but you enjoy sociable relationships with many people of both sexes. You will relinquish the reins of ardent responsibility rather early in life, from choice, not necessity.

Successful people born April 13:

1. Gen. Henry T. Allen, U. S. A.
2. Fred Houdlett Albee, surgeon (orthopedic).
3. John William Davis, counselor American Red Cross, 1913-1918.
4. William H. Beard, artist.
5. Denison Chase, inventor, scales.
6. Samuel H. Scudder, scientist authority on butterflies.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Jealous Husbands.

WILL all the wives who have jealous husbands, kindly lend a listening ear for the next few hundred words? Thank you. It is Lottie this time. Lottie wants to hear from "wives who have known the joy of a husband who was in love enough to be jealous and show it." Now, keep calm, keep calm, Lottie is young. She will learn. You can teach her. At present she is planning to disappear just to see what he will do. If the husbands will stop that snorting we will go on with the story. Or let Lottie tell you. Can't you just see Lottie—and her bewildered husband of six months?

Dear Frances McDonald:

I have just read the letter from the girl whose sweetheart will not get jealous and I would like to warn her not to marry such a man. I did—six months ago. And I could tell her plenty. You told her Miss McDonald that "a sensible man married to a sensible woman does not easily fly into a jealous rage." Very well. But he can have the grace to at least show that he knows when another man is interested in his wife. And if he does not, then I say that there is something the matter with him. I want to hear from all the wives who have husbands in love enough to be jealous and show it. They know the joy of having a husband who is a real lover. I want that joy. I do not want a stick who sits and says, "Well, why should you be surprised that the men still like you?" I want love. And any man who loves shows jealousy when other men admire his wife. I have told him even when men have tried to kiss me. All he will say is "You should not have let him get a start." But nothing more Just changes the subject. Is that love? I say a husband should do something when his wife tells him some other man has tried to kiss her. I want the sort of man who will. I know one, too. And I am going to politely disappear for a while and let friend husband just figure it out by himself where I am.

If that girl marries the man she now loves, she will hate him in six months. I never really bother with any other man and would never give one a single thought if he would only show that he loves me. He will say "I would not do that—you may be misunderstood. I understand you but others may not." This is when I tell him I think it will ring up some man and date him for lunch in town. Believe me, I want a husband who will say "Just you try that once and see what will happen to you and him, too." If there are no more of those left, then I am satisfied to do without any husband at all for the rest of my life. I want a man. And I do not consider any husband a man who is not jealous of his wife—and not ashamed to show it. I want the wives on both sides to come out and tell the truth.

LOTTIE.

Now, girls, here is the chance you have been looking for. You can now go into that matter of the sulks after the Jones' housewarming, and the lovely time you did not have at Edna's just because dear hubby decided you danced too often with that fellow with the mustache. Come on! Lottie wants the truth. Let her hear all the truth there is about that greatest of joys—the fire-eating husband. Tell her how your heart glows when the great lover accepts but does not return your kiss and instead informs you that he "happened into the Willard at lunch"—the fact that you were dragged there unexpectedly, sounding like a last-minute alibi. Tell Lottie all about it. She really ought to know! Tell her how thrilling it is to be glared at from the other side of the table when dining out. Omit none of the details. Perhaps you can convince her that being figuratively dragged around by the hair is not the ravishing experience she believes it to be. The truth, sisters!

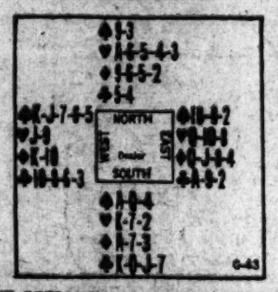
WORK ON BRIDGE

A CHOICE OF SUITS.



I REFRAIN from naming the prominent Eastern card club at which I recently saw the above hand misplayed, but will take advantage of the faux pas to demonstrate a mistake sometimes made by players who consider themselves above the average.

The game was Contract: South bid two No Trumps and North, having the Ace of Hearts at the head of a five-card suit, had the minimum for a raise to three. Three Hearts would have meant a long weak suit, and North had not the strength to bid four Hearts.

West led the Six of Spades, North played the Trey, East the Eight and South won with the Queen. South then led the King of Clubs, East winning with the Ace and leading the Ten of Spades which South ducked, but had to take the third round with the Ace.

South then led the King of Hearts and next another Heart; West played the Jack and North did not dare to duck because West had two long Spades. Then, as the good Heart was adversely held and dummy had no entry, North led a Club and South took two Club tricks, but failed to make his contract.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

South should not have monkeyed with his Clubs; he should have led a small Heart to trick 2 and permitted either adversary to win the trick by playing small from dummy. Then the third lead of Spades could be won and four Hearts run. That would give Declarer six tricks and cause the adversaries some troublesome discarding. The Ace of Diamonds and two Club tricks would make game, and the play must succeed if East holds the Ace of Clubs; with that card in West's hand, game can not be made if West held five Spades originally.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, PH.D.

THE family name "Riddle" (also spelled "Riddel," "Riddell," "Riddal" and "Riddall" is a Scottish clan name of great antiquity. It has come down to us from various sources. Sometimes it represents the Anglo-Saxon personal name "Raedel," which may be translated "little counsel" or "little advice." Another Anglo-Saxon source is the personal name "Wraedel," meaning "little wreath." Some families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in Riddle, County Roxburgh, Scotland. "Riddle" has often become confused with "Reddall" and "Reddell."

The family name "Reddall" is of English origin. It means "the red hall," and indicates that the persons who were first so called lived in a large red building.

The family name "Reddell" has come down to us from two English sources. Sometimes it is derived from the Old English "readhyll," meaning "red hill," and indicates an early place of residence on a hill recognized by its red soil. A certain Richard atte Redehulle is mentioned in an English document of the year 1327. Sometimes "Reddell" stands for the Old English "read-welle," meaning "red well," and indicates an original place of residence near a well which had been dug in red soil. Some families which bear this name have received it because of having once lived in Reddell, Worcestershire. This place-name was spelled "Redewell" in the thirteenth century.

The family name "Clemenceau" is of French origin, and means "little Clement." The personal name "Clement" is ultimately of Latin origin, and means "merciful."

Spreading Sand Before Brides

THERE IS A LEGEND THAT KING CANUTE FORDED A STREAM AND SAT DOWN TO SHAKE THE SAND OUT OF HIS SHOE. JUST THEN A BRIDAL COUPLE PASSED. CANUTE WISHED THEM JOY AND AS MANY CHILDREN AS HE HAD SHAKEN OUT SAND GRAINS. SO IN SOME SECTIONS THE SAND-SPREADING CUSTOM STILL PERSISTS.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

NEW METHOD FOR DIPHTHERIA CONTROL.

FOR those who want to have their children vaccinated against diphtheria but who are restrained from doing so by one force or another, there is a new way to beat the devil around the stump. Dr. Lowenstein, one of the best scientists in Germany, has invented a salve which serves the purpose. This salve contains diphtheria toxoid and some killed diphtheria bacilli mixed with a good ointment base or grease. This ointment is thoroughly rubbed into the skin of the back over the rib region. These rubbings are given at ten-day intervals. Three rubs constitute a vaccination. The skin is first washed with soap and water, thoroughly dried, washed with alcohol and ether, dried, and then the ointment is rubbed in.

Drs. Kegel and Gasul tried the ointment on 47 children. They first gave them a Schick test to establish their susceptibility to diphtheria. Not enough work has been done to prove what proportion of a great mass of children could be protected by this method, nor how long the protection will last. Enough has been done to establish that the method has merit and is worth trying by all those who can not or will not use the injection method.

In the first place, it seems to be entirely safe and it causes no unpleasant symptoms. It does not make the child sensitive to protein. The presence of the dead bacteria in the salve is supposed to make it somewhat protective against bacteria as well as against bacterial toxin. If a person feels that he can not protect his child without being inconsistent with his public utterances or affiliations, this method offers him what the politicians call a "chance for an out." All of these points are in favor of the method. On the other side is the fact that the injection method makes immune a larger proportion of those on whom it is used. As a protection against diphtheria it is the safer method.

BOTTLE-FED BABY.

Mrs. T. A. writes: I have a baby 3 months old. The doctor tells me to give her the bottle every three hours, but she cries more often than every three hours for her bottle. In this way she drinks almost double the amount of milk the doctor ordered. Will this harm her in any way? She is gaining weight.

REPLY.

Babies of that age are usually on a four-hour schedule, or getting ready for it. A two-hour interval allows the stomach no rest. Don't you think you are dealing with a spoiled baby?

NEED NOT DO MUCH.

Mrs. S. W. B writes: For the past year I have lived in a hot-air heated house. My ears have given trouble since that time in their failure to secrete wax. My ears are dry unless I use sweet oil in them to soften the wax. What should I do? For the past two weeks my ears have not responded to the oil.

REPLY.

I never heard that living in dry air would stop the secretion of ear wax, but it may do so. Evaporate water enough to keep the air moist if anything need be done. Your letter does not suggest much need of doing anything.

With unbelievable brutality, killer Kane and Ardala had knocked Wilma unconscious. Taking the little disintegrator with them, they sneaked out of the Atlantian prison cell—but Wilma quickly came to, and—Wil-Wilma—what happened?—Oooh, how my head aches—I—I—C-C-can't even th-think!
Suddenly she remembered!
Killer Kane—and Ardala—they have the disintegrator—they'll melt their way right into the submarine dock—and get away with our ship!
Weak—dizzy—but with invincible courage, she staggered to her feet.

Virginia Lacrossers Drilling for Ga. Tech

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 12.—Virginia's lacrosse team, which was disappointed in its attempts to win victories in its first two games, is hoping to have better luck when Georgia Tech comes here for a contest next Thursday.

Coach Welch has just about completed the organization of a separate first-year lacrosse team, and from now on these novices will scrimmage the varsity players three times each week. This is expected to result in considerable improvement in team play.

The Virginia stickmen have their first game away from home next Saturday against Johns Hopkins in Baltimore. Later they head South for return matches with Georgia and Georgia Tech.

Cliff Sutter, New Orleans, intercollegiate champion, defeated George Lott, Davis Cup star, 6—4, 6—3, in an exhibition match. Both Sutter and Lott had been eliminated from the tournament.

Harvard Will Invade Charlottesville Tomorrow.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 12. Virginia's Baseball Team has its first game away from home tomorrow afternoon against Virginia Military Institute in Lexington. This will be the third contest for the Cavaliers in the Tri-State Intercollegiate League.

Harvard comes to Lambeth Field for a baseball game Tuesday. The Crimson nine is making its annual swing through the South Atlantic States. Rumors have come out of Cambridge that the Harvard Team may cease its invasions of this section after 1931.

Eddie McGrath in Infield.

Ben Ticknor, captain of the Crimson Football Team last fall, will be playing left field and Barry Wood, captain-elect of the '31 eleven, will be on first base.

Harvard will be just starting upon a series of 28 baseball games that will keep the players busy until the series with Yale is completed late in June. Last year Harvard won 10 baseball games and lost 14.

After the game with Harvard, the Cavaliers will rest and practice until the end of the week when they start on a three-game trip. Princeton will be played at Princeton on April 18 and 20 and Maryland in College Park on April 21.

He was at the Exmoor Club his last ten years.

Teamed with Walter Travis, Gardner won many minor golf titles during his prime, around 1901 to 1904. In 1902, he and Travis tied for second in the national open championship.

CHICAGO AND CLEVELAND TO MEET IN OPENER

Manager Donie Bush will send his Chicago White Sox against the Cleveland Indians, led by Manager Roger Peckinpaugh, at Cleveland tomorrow when the American League season opens. Upon Earl Averill, center-fielder, and Johnny Hodapp, second baseman, Peckinpaugh is placing much of his hopes for a successful year. Smead Jolley, outfielder, and Luke Appling, young infielder, are expected to aid the Sox in the pennant drive.

5-CLUB RACE IS SEEN BY HORNSBY

Collins Says Red Sox to Escape Cellar This Season.

(This is the seventh of a series of statements on major league baseball prospects, furnished the Associated Press by the club managers).

By ROGERS HORNSBY
(Manager, Chicago Cubs).

WHERE the Cubs finish in the 1931 National League race depends mostly on how the pitching staff stands up under a long campaign. Pitching is 85 per cent of a ball club and we feel that with Malone, Root, Smith, Blake and Bush, we have five starting pitchers who will compare with any in the league.

I expect to receive valuable relief work from Teachout, Sweetland, May, Baecht, Warneke and Osborn.

We will start the season with the same infield and outfield we used last season except that I expect to play 154 games at second base. We also will have valuable relief strength in Blair, Beck and Jurges. I consider Jurges one of the finest prospects in recent years.

Five teams should be serious factors in the pennant race. St. Louis, New York, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and the Cubs all have fine chances in what should be one of the closest races in years. While not predicting a flag for the Cubs, I am sure they will be in there fighting for it during the entire season.

By JOHN (SHANO) COLLINS.
(Manager, Boston Red Sox).

The Boston American League squad returned from training trip in grand condition. The pitchers are in such fine trim that practically all of them are in condition to work the full nine innings. The entire squad is ready for the opening game and I am well pleased with the outlook.

The Red Sox will not finish in the American League cellar this year. I will not venture to predict just how far up the ladder they will climb, but it seems certain to me that we are going somewhere.

The exhibition games afforded an opportunity to size up certain candidates and a few games that we lost while the squad was split into two divisions, playing games in different cities, enabled me to determine the actual ability of some men. When the full squad was assembled in Columbus, Ohio, we were able to muster a line-up that won three games in a row.

The Red Sox are stronger than they have been for some years. Such additions as "Muddy" Ruel, Wiley Moore and Van Camp are bound to prove valuable.

WOOD HOPES FOR RECORD TODAY

Aims to Break Mark Set by Don; Wind Change Awaited.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 12 (A.P.).—Gar Wood tomorrow hopes to establish a new world's motorboat speed record. The engines of his Miss America IX have been tuned, the bottom has been polished to reduce all possible resistance and he awaits only favorable wind and weather conditions for his attempt to regain the water speed supremacy he recently lost to Kaye Don of England.

Don piloted his Miss England II to a new world's record of 103.49 miles an hour at Buenos Aires surpassing by only 1.334 miles an hour the former record set by Wood at 102.256.

The same east wind which blew across the course on Indian Creek and prevented any speed trials yesterday continued to sweep in from the ocean tonight, bringing with it frequent rain squalls.

Wood said his runs could not be made until the wind was parallel with the course. He explained that a cross wind necessitated giving too much attention to the rudder and thus makes high speed dangerous.

If the wind subsides and the weather clears, Wood indicated he might make his trials as early as 7 a. m. tomorrow. He said he was hopeful of making a record of 105 miles an hour.

ORCUTT SETS MARK.

Maureen Orcutt's 75 clipped two strokes from the course record for women at Pinehurst. Glenna Collett turned in 77 last year.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 12 (A.P.).—North Carolina won three games last week to climb out of the cellar in the Tristate Intercollegiate Baseball League and into a tie with Washington and Lee for leadership of the circuit.

On Friday the Tarheel nine captured a double-header from Maryland in College Park by scores of 4 to 2 and 8 to 4. Yesterday it won the first game in a series with Virginia by a count of 6 to 1. Earlier in the week Washington and Lee defeated the Cavaliers, 6 to 1, to stay on top of the league.

Jim Bean, Capital Turfman, Succumbs to Heart Attack

JAMES W. BEAN, 59, well-known local turfman, died at his home, 1516 Allison street northwest, yesterday afternoon after an illness of short duration. Death was due to heart disease. Mr. Bean had been stricken only about ten days ago, after retiring to his bedroom in apparently good health. Only the day previous he had attended the races at Bowie, where several of his horses were quartered.

Attending physicians entertained high hopes for his recovery until Saturday night, when he began to fail rapidly. The end came shortly after 4 o'clock.

His wife, Edith Elizabeth Bean, two sisters and one brother survive. The brother, Thomas Bean, resides at the same address, while one sister, Mrs. George Beckett, lives at 628 North Carolina avenue southeast. The other sister, Mrs. Ida Bosworth, maintains her residence in Chicago, Ill.

Known among his sportsmen friends as Jim, Mr. Bean spent the largest part of his time in this city, and at his breeding farm at Silver Spring, Md. He has been a familiar figure on Maryland tracks for many years. One of his best known horses was Donaghee, a surprise stake winner in the Old Line State, and which later won several other important races.

The popular horseman was noted for his successful development of jockeys. He brought Chick Lang to the front and the lad became one of the best of stake riders, winning the Futurity with Anita Peabody, and later finishing first in several of the larger stakes when astride Reigh Count. Lang was on Reigh Count in the Pimlico Futurity, when he claimed a foul against Earl Sande on Batteau. Mr. Bean also developed A. Adams, one of the most successful young jockeys in the country, who rode a record number of winners last year.

John Berly, recruit right-hander from Rochester of the International League, went the route for the Giants and kept the White Sox's nine hits well scattered. He was in serious trouble only in the fifth inning when the Sox bunched three hits, including Reynolds' homer, for three runs.

Hal McKain, who went the full route for the Sox, was hit hard with Lindstrom and Leslie leading the Giants' attack. Lindstrom's three hits drove in two runs and Leslie's pair of safeties were good for three tallies.

St. Louis, April 12 (A.P.).—The Browns defeated the Cardinals today, 6 to 4, in the final game of the annual two-game spring series. The Cardinals won yesterday.

Young "Dizzy" Dean, who started for the Cardinals, had a bad first inning, when he allowed three hits, two of them slow infield rollers, and issued a base on balls, which gave the Browns three runs. A homer by Oscar Melillo was the only other trouble Dean had. He retired in the sixth inning.

NATS DEFEAT ROCHESTER CLUB, 3-1

Fischer Hurls Steady Game as Nats End Exhibitions.

THE Nationals looked like "hitless wonders" yesterday in winning their final 1931 pre-season game. The Rochester Redwings, minor league champions, were their victims, 3 to 1, with only five Washington hits being recorded. These came when they did the most good, however, although only one of the runs was earned. This triumph gave the Nats a record of 16 for the exhibition season as against four losses and two ties. About 2,500 fans were on hand yesterday.

Carl Fischer, young left-hander, who frequently faced Rochester while with Newark in the International last year, asked for yesterday's assignment and came through nicely. While granting eight hits, he kept them fairly well scattered, walked three and fanned six. He was in holes in the first two frames, but thereafter never had any worries.

Rochester Uses Three Pitchers.

Billy Southworth, Rochester pilot, used three pitchers, Herman Bell, ex-Cardinal, set the Nats down in order in the first three frames and Larry Irvin, a southpaw, who succeeded him, granted but two hits in the next three. One was an infield tap to deep short which Myer, who was back at second in Hayes' place, beat out and did not hurt him, but the other scored a Washington run. This was the only extra-base blow of the game, a double to right by Sam Rice, which scored Myer, who had walked opening round 6.

This run knotted the count, for the Redwings had broken the ice in the second, when they knicked Fischer's offerings for three hits. With one gone, Jordan singled and, after Jonnard lofted to Manush, Bell and Myers contributed one-base knocks. The aliens stopped here but the Nats scored again in the seventh and eighth, although both of these runs were tainted.

Harry Rice Drives In Run.

Buck Foreman was on the hill and an error gave Cronin life starting the "lucky" frame. After Judge had hit into a force-play, he completed the cycle on Harry Rice's single and Bluege's helpful out. Myer's scratch single and Manush's hit of the same proportions, coupled with Fischer's two-base error on it, were responsible for the Nats' marker in the eighth.

Three Redwings accounted for the bulk of the alien hits, Myers, Sisler and Jordan getting two each. Buddy Myer was the only native getting this many. Although charged with a costly error, Fisher made the best play of the day, robbing Cronin of an extra-baser with a running back-hand catch opening the sixth. The Nat pitcher was given good all-round support, two fast double-plays making the going considerably easier for him.

Valreas II, 19 to 1, Lonchamp Winner

Longchamp, France, April 12 (A.P.). George Wildenstein's Valreas II won the annual Debutante Prix Juigne for three-year-olds by a length and a half here today. White Bait was second and Follo third. The winner paid 19 to 1 in the betting.

The race, over a course of a mile and a quarter, was worth $4,000.

McCarthy Next Head Of American, Rumored

New York, April 12 (A.P.).—The New York American says it has learned that William H. McCarthy, of San Francisco, will succeed the late Ernest S. Barnard as president of the American League.

McCarthy's election, says the newspaper, will come as soon as the league club owners gather for their special meeting, probably next month.

According to the newspaper, the former president of the Pacific Coast League is strongly supported by Col. Jacob Ruppert, president of the New York Yankees, and by directors of the Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Boston clubs.

Light Hitting Of Regulars Is Cause

Attack of Grippe to Keep West Idle; Arm Improves.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

BUDDY MYER, who had been sitting on the bench during games since a week before the Nationals deserted their Biloxi training camp, was put back in the Washington line-up yesterday and probably will start at second in tomorrow's opening game against the Athletics.

This change was not decided upon by Manager Walter Johnson because Jack Hayes, who has been getting a long trial, was deemed a failure, but, rather, was the result of a series of circumstances. No one questions but what Myer is a better hitter than Hayes, or that Hayes can outfield Myer, and Jack probably would have been allowed to remain in the line-up but for the weak hitting of some of his mates.

More Hitting Power Needed.

Ossie Bluege is not hitting his weight, however, while Catcher Roy Spencer also is regarded as a weak hitter, making it necessary, as Johnson sees things, to sacrifice Hayes' superior defensive play for the batting power Myer is known to possess.

Last night Johnson had not definitely made up his mind as to whether Myer would get the call over Hayes in tomorrow's inaugural, but it is dollars to doughnuts that this will prove to be the case. Myer was credited with two hits yesterday, twice beating out infield taps.

Another doubtful position is centerfield. Trainer Mike Martin visited Sammy West, the regular, yesterday morning and reports that the grippe, which settled in his throwing arm, has been worked out and that there was practically no swelling visible. He is of the opinion that West is not suffering from a recurrence of the injury which put him on the shelf twice last season and that, as far as the arm is concerned, West could play tomorrow, but that the grippe probably will keep him out. West remained in bed all day yesterday.

West Possibility as Starter.

Martin's opinion—and "Sir Mique" should know whereof he speaks—was received with considerable joy by both Manager Johnson and the player himself, both of whom having feared that the arm had been injured in some unknown manner and that Sam would be out for at least a week. If Martin's diagnosis is correct, it is possible but not probable that West will be doing business at his old stand tomorrow. If not, Harry Rice will draw the assignment.

Pitcher Ad Liska, all enthused, returned yesterday from his visit to Youngstown to have his salary wing fixed. "Bonesetter" Reese, the miracle man he hoped to have treat him, was ill, but his assistant took the case, found a misplaced muscle in Ad's right shoulder, snapped it back into place, told Ad to rest it for a week, and sent him home satisfied that within ten days he will be tossing them over as well as he ever was.

George Staler, former Nat, Brown and Braves first-sacker, covered the doorway yesterday for Rochester. He fielded well and showed that, although his eyes may bother him in other respects, they have not slowed him up much as a hitter. He was credited with two safeties.

Feud on in Fischer Family.

There seemed to be a feud in the Fischer family yesterday. Carl, Nat pitcher, hit George, who spells his name without the "c," in the third inning yesterday and the Rochester outfielder seemed quite peeved about it.

Umpire oy Van Grafian, who has been capably handling the Nats' exhibition games this spring, left last night for his home at Rochester. He draws the New York-Boston series in the "Big Town" as his first league assignment.

Manager Johnson has ordered his athletes to report at Griffith Stadium this morning for a final workout before the serious business of fighting for a pennant begins.

Harry Rice used his head as well as his legs in the seventh inning yesterday when he went all the way from first to third on Bluege's roller to Rollings.

Although "Sheriff" Dave Harris led the Nationals with the willow in the exhibition series

RACING SCENE SHIFTS TO HAVRE DE GRACE TODAY

Feature Race Is Test for Equipoise

Charity Will Benefit From First Day's Program.

Leading Stables Race Juveniles; Crowd Expected.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 12.—The Harford Association begins its spring meeting tomorrow at Havre de Grace, the "Green Harbor" that nestles so gracefully in the elbow of land that guides the Susquehanna into Chesapeake Bay, that is so attractive to horses and horsemen, and draws its thousands of visitors from Eastern cities, especially Philadelphia and New York, on the one side, and from Washington and Baltimore on the other.

The track itself is not only the charming necklace that encircles acres of grass and clover, but it is one of the best race courses in the country, deep in loam, without sharp turns or grades. It draws the best stables, the stars pointing to the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont get their trials here; the cream of the 2-year-olds that later will go for fortunes in the futurities will first romp around the friendly course of Ed Burke and Jimmy Ross.

Equipoise to See Action.

The horse, whose name is on a million tongues—Equipoise—will be seen in action today for the first time of his 3-year-old career. The swift son of Pennant—Swinging has ruled the favorite in the future books on the Derby since long before the official entries were issued; he seems on the threshold of the fame that was Gallant Fox's a year ago.

There are others—Twenty Grand, Jamestown, Vander Pool, Ormesby, Sir Ashley, Happy Scot, Siskin, Rip Van Winkle—that will fight it out with Equipoise, but the C. V. Whitney colt steals the spotlight. Crowds look on when he flashes on the track for a gallop. It was said that Jamestown was his master last year, but the distinction is Equipose's now. Few have seen Equipose work. All the people know is what some watch tells them about the colt. Dozens of others have worked as fast. But thousands are interested in Equipose, where hundreds inquire about the others. This all know, that Equipose raced from early spring to the late fall—from "Bowie to Bowie"—without a let-up, a day's illness or any indication of decline in speed. Perfectly made, but not large, he is balanced, and outstanding at vital parts—his heart, lungs and legs. Others with great speed that might be named have been on the shelf, ailing from one cause or anotoher, but Equipose, like Gallant Fox, is always ready.

Leading Owners Saddle Juveniles.

Illustrating the character of stables attracted to Havre de Grace, it may be mentioned that in the first race for 2-year-old fillies are the richly bred Blow Fly by Wildair—Bubble, owned by C. V. Whitney; Glen Riddle Farm's Temple Bells, by Man o' War—Golden Haze; Greentree Stable's Love Offering by John Grier—Valentine; Middleburg Stable's General Advance, by Our General—Never Sets; Cary T. Grayson's Misty, by High Cloud—Armide; J. P. White's Maureen O., by Golden Boss-Pocket Vase; W. M. Jeffords' Gloria Maris, by Mars—Painted Lady; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Brocade, by The Porter—Brocatelle; H. Teller Archibald's Westys Rose, by Westy Hogan—Rose Eternal; Linton Farm's Vagaries, by Chilhowee—Sarah Day. These are only the fillies making their first start. Others in the race have entered. But among the baby racers mentioned may be some of the fastest in the country.

The proceeds of the first day will go to charity, like Bowie contributed, but Havre de Grace must wait until fall to get an extra day as recompense, for the present meeting can only run for twelve days. The races begin at 2:30. Special trains will be run at intervals by the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

There will be four $10,000 stakes at the meeting: Wednesday, the Harford Handicap; Saturday, Philadelphia Handicap; April 25, the Aberdeen for 2-year-olds; same day, the Chesapeake for 3-year-olds, a Preakness and Derby trial.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

"HI-JACK" has been walking on stilts for twenty years. His longest stroll was his 7,000-mile jaunt from the Atlantic to the Pacific and return. All in all, "Hi-Jack" has stilt-walked 30,000 miles.

Either the male rhea of South America is terribly henpecked, or the female rhea is cheated of her maternal rights by her mate, for the male bird takes it upon himself to attend to all cares of homemaking and the responsibilities of raising a family. Neither is this strange bird satisfied by merely taking care of a single family, for, unlike most other birds, it is his habit to possess from three to five wives—and he insists that he care for the babies of them all. To be sure of this honor the rhea builds a nest and lets his wives take turns laying their eggs in the same nest. When the female birds have completed their egg laying—or whenever the male feels they should stop—he sits upon the nest until the young are hatched. Then when the baby rheas come into the world they follow their papa around instead of their mama.

Equipoise Picked to Win Opening Feature at 'Graw

Dark Hero Is Rated Chief Contender by Snodgrass.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 12.—The opening day card at Havre de Grace is well balanced, the fields not too large nor too small, and a better grade of horses are to be seen in action tomorrow afternoon than were at Bowie, which closed Saturday, for the reason that the horses that raced at Bowie are in better condition, and that several large New York and Philadelphia stables that did not race at Bowie, and others that did not send their best material there, have their leading thoroughbreds at the Harford course.

The feature is the Glen Oaks, at 6 furlongs, and in which C. V. Whitney's EQUIPOISE will make his initial start of the year. The last race of this colt was last fall at Pimlico, in which he won the Futurity, and retired for the year the leading money winner of his age. Having trained well at Havre de Grace since being sent on from winter quarters, he seems a standout in the race. No jockey has ever ridden this colt except Workman, but Robertson will ride him today, while Workman is recuperating and occasionally galloping horses in the morning to get in trim. DARK HERO is believed next best. He has rested during the winter, and his last race was at Laurel, which he won from Maj. Lanphier. SUNNY LASSIE, like EQUIPOISE and DARK HERO, is a candidate for the Derby and Preakness, and should be in the money.

FIRST RACE—C. V. Whitney's BLOW FLY is selected among the two-year-old fillies to win the opening dash. This is on breeding and the close training by Fred Hopkins, who also trains Equipoise. William Brennan will saddle LOVE OFFERING for the Greentree Stable. She is rated a contender on the same grounds as is BLOW FLY to win. And in the class probably is the Man-O'War filly, TEMPLE BELLS. She may be third. It is believed these and others among the non-starters, excel those that are entered for this race which have had racing experience.

SECOND RACE—EVERYTIME looks best on his Bowie record. He beat Elizabeth Bolla there, and later ran third to Prometheus. He is fit. HOLIDAY will bear watching. That last race of his was not as good as he will do. G. D. Widener's SCATTER ran well at Miami and may be a keen contender.

THIRD RACE—PROTRACTOR is the selection for the third, an allowance purse, and his victory over Pennant Lass at Bowie should be sufficient proof of his speed, to say nothing of his Miami form. CON AMORE may be favorite. She is very fast, but may need condition. Her last race was last November at Bowie, in which she was second to Mokstam.

FIFTH RACE—ERA has the edge on the field and should win, but SPECTACULAR, second Saturday, should be given another chance and is rated a contender. The race is a mile and a furlong. She beat a good field at St. Johns. BRIGHT DAY, a winner Saturday, may be dangerous, and should be in the money.

SIXTH RACE—LUCK PIECE can repeat in the sixth. He beat Shark by a length at Bowie. MADDER is reported in condition, and may be a close contender. She won her last race in Florida, and has trained well. BASK will doubtless improve. It was in the money its last two starts at Bowie.

SEVENTH RACE—Keith will have MARYDALE to beat in the seventh. He was gaining on Negodale in his last start at Bowie. He gets his distance in this. C. M. Kelly has him ready and while MARYDALE is a speedy mare, the route may be too long. VOLTMETER is another horse with a chance here. The track is fast.

33 FAVORITES SCORED AT BOWIE

Robertson, Remillard Tie; Weights for Harford Listed.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAVRE de Grace, Md., April 12.—Thirty-three favorites won races at Bowie, 17 were second and 13 third. Fifteen long shots won, with Peace Dove, at 53 to 1, the longest priced horse at the meeting. Only three odds-on choices won.

James A. Latane, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, will resign tomorrow, and probably will be succeeded by Edward Warfield, jr. Jerbes Spencer will be made chairman and John F. Mudd is the other commissioner.

Alfred Robertson and Pat Remillard tied for leading jockeys at Bowie, eleven winners each. D. Meade had eight winning mounts. Madeley, Ellis and Pegg six each; E. Watters and D. E. Froggatte four each.

The Bowie meeting scored a success after all the bad weather, and the parimutuel "handle" on Saturday was far above the half million mark. "It looked like old days," said J. E. Farrell, general manager.

Weights were announced for the Harford Handicap, to be run Wednesday, $10,000 added. The Sagamore Stable's Balko was given top impost of 126 pounds, Grattan 114, Finite 120, The Heathen 118, Sun Beau 124. Others are much lighter. As the distance is six furlongs, it seems Sun Beau is not well placed. King Boggen has 103, Happy Scot 108, William Zeigler's star, Spinach, has 118. There is material for a spectacular race in the list of eligibles, which number 30.

The Chesapeake at Havre de Grace has been run for twelve years. It has furnished in its winners one Derby winner, Whiskery. The Aberdeen has furnished two Derby winners—Paul Jones and George Smith.

DERBY HOPES ON SCENE OF RACE

60 Nominees Training in Kentucky; Up at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 12 (A.P.).—With the arrival of warm weather, preparations for the Kentucky Derby received an added impetus in the Blue Grass State, though frequent rains have prevented many fast moves among the eligibles quartered at Churchill Downs and Lexington.

Of the 130 nominees for the 1931 Derby May 16, about 60 are on Kentucky soil, most of them in training. Among recent prominent arrivals at the Downs were Mrs. J. N. Crofton's Up, winner of the Agua Caliente Derby, and Prince D'Amour, Joseph Leiter's eligible, which was the leading 2-year-old at New Orleans last year.

Prince D'Amour is among the 64 nominees for the Clark Handicap, $10,000 added stake that will feature the opening day at the Downs May 2. In all there were eleven Derby eligibles nominated for the Clark, a mile and one-sixteenth race for 3-year-olds and upward.

Whiskery Named For Stake.

Up is the second winner of 1931 derbies to reach Kentucky. Spanish Play, which won the Louisiana Derby for C. H. Knebelkamp, is at Lexington, engaging in almost daily workouts. He will race in the Ben Ali Handicap, $3,000 added feature of the opening day at Lexington Saturday. Lightning Bolt, winner of the Florida Derby, was not nominated for the Kentucky Derby.

Pittsburgher, T. E. Meuller's big colt, continued to advance in training and is credited with the fastest mile workout to date, running the distance in 1:42 4-5 at the Downs. At Lexington two eligibles have turned in fast mile moves, both in 1:43 3-5. They are Sweep All, owned by Charles T. Fisher, and Kenasha, owned by D. D. Canfield. Workouts as long as a mile have been few so far among the eligibles.

Lerose, owned by James C. Ellis, was the second Derby eligible among the 130 to be declared definitely out of the race. Injured in Florida, he has not recovered sufficently to be placed in training. The first to be declared out was Skifey, E. B. McLean's only nominee, which went lame and was withdrawn from training.

Alex. Athlete Seeks 4th Letter at Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., April 12 (A.P.).—Herbert Bryant, of Alexandria, Va., celebrated his twenty-second birthday yesterday by making it just about certain that he will win a letter in his fourth major sport at the University of Virginia.

Bryant competed for the first time in track yesterday in the dual meet, in which Virginia defeated Maryland, 98 to 30. He won two first places, putting the shot 42 feet 7 inches, and throwing the discus 132 feet 10½ inches. If he duplicates these performances in another meet this season, he will receive his "V" in track.

This spring Bryant has been giving more attention to baseball than to track. But in his first competition in the discus he came within less than 2 feet of measuring up to the University of Virginia record of 134 feet 2 inches, established by Maurice LeBauer in 1928.

After competing in track Bryant entered the baseball game with North Carolina, playing right field and scoring the only run made by Virginia against the Tarheels. In the seventh inning he knocked a line drive over center field which would have been a home run if the ball had not hit the curbing on the running track and bounded back. Bryant stopped on third, and scored on a single by Brewer.

Bryant has won his football "v" for two seasons, and received the major sport award for baseball last sping. During the winter he won his letter in boxing, representing Virginia as a heavyweight.

VIRGINIA WHITE SOX WIN.

Scoring four runs in the seventh and one in the eighth inning, the Virginia White Sox came from behind to take the measure of the Majestic Radio team of Washington, 7 to 6. Both teams were in the slugging mood, the winners collecting 14 hits and the losers 15. Scheffel's triple featured the winners' attack.

Sandlot Teams Take Full Advantage of Spring Day

All Sizes of Ball Players in Action; Montgomery County Nines, of Capital City League, Meet Tonight.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

THE thud of the horsehide striking the wood resounded over the sandlots yesterday, as the numerous sandlot pilots grasped the opportunity presented by the ideal weather to send their charges through long drills.

From early in the forenoon until dusk, the athletes trekked to the various playing fields for practice. They came from all sections, and in all sizes, with the oldest unlimited player just as enthusiastic as the youngest peewee. The Monument Grounds and Ellipse were a veritable mecca for the teams.

Practice Games Played.

Some of the more advanced teams indulged in practice tilts, and several close scores were recorded. With the opening game of the unlimited section of the Capital City League scheduled for three weeks hence, the managers of teams in this loop were particularly glad for the chance to look over their aggregations. The unfavorable weather which has prevailed on the past several Sabbath days had the amateur bosses worried not a little.

The seniors, too, welcomed the day with open arms. The keen race anticipated for The Post's gold baseballs has the teams of this division anxious to be in tip-top shape when the starting gun booms. The pennant chase in this class is expected to be unusually hard fought, with both the champs and the runners-up of last season back in the fold.

Little Teams Are Active.

The majority of the junior nines contented themselves with intensive batting and fielding drills, but in the midget class several of the combinations were playing their third or fourth games. The spring training in this section commences with the arrival of the first robin, and the red-breast was reported in the vicinity about the same time the major leaguers were heading South. These boys, therefore, are, with exceptions, ready to go. That also applies to the classes directly below them, namely, the Insects and the Peewees.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, in room 2 of the District Building, the unlimited nines who will compete in the Montgomery County section of the Capital City League, will confer with officials of the loop and transact business incidental to the launching of the 1931 campaign. A large delegation of representatives from the suburban towns is expected to attend.

Later on in the week, probably Thursday night, the Virginia group will gather to organize their league. Definite announcement of this meeting will be published in The Post Wednesday morning.

1,000-Mile Auto Race Record Falls in Italy

Brescia, Italy, April 12 (A.P.).—Caracciola and Sebastian, in a Mercedes, established a new record in Italy's "thousand mile road race" today. The winners were timed in 16 hours, 10 seconds for the 1,635 kilometers, an average speed of 101.47 kilometers an hour. The former record was 100.45 kilometers an hour.

A field of 152 cars, leaving at one minute intervals, began the grind over a course leading from Bologna through Florence, Rome, Perugia, Feltre and Verona and winding up at Brescia.

The Mount Rainier Seniors bowed in defeat to the Linworth Athletic Club in the opening game of the season, played on the Mount Rainier diamond, yesterday. The game, which ended with the score 7 to 5 in the Southwest lads' favor, was marred by the inevitable crop of early season errors.

CALZA IS SET FOR MAT BOUT

Hefty Italian Meets Demetrol Tonight on Strand Card.

WRESTLING fans who like to see the big boys in action should get their money's worth at the Strand Theater tonight, when George Calza, 245-pound Italian, tackles Bill Demetral, former Greek champion, who tips the scales at 230, in the feature bout of an attractive card.

Calza boasts a reputation of not only being one of the largest wrestlers in captivity but of being one of the top-notchers. Two decisions over Jim Londos, title claimant, means that he must know his stuff and that Demetral will have to live up to his advance notices to win the decision.

Demetrol No Set-Up For Calza.

Life for Calza seems to be work and then more work, for one of his greatest battles is against old John Fat and he trains like any boxer to keep off surplus avoirdupois. Long grinds over the road are part of his daily training and, in order to develop wind-power he has conceived the unique method of rolling a big automobile tire around a couple of miles each day. He is reported to be at the top of his game right now.

In Demetral, Calza will have no set-up tonight. The Greek is a veteran in the mat game and holds decisions over some of the outstanding men in the "agony" racket. Demetral recently was taken on by Strangler Lewis and, although losing the decision, he showed plenty of scrap. He is, by the way, one of those rough and ready customers who gives plenty of punishment and who can also take it.

Matchmaker Mike Thomas has arranged an interesting supporting card. The Mexican Embassy promises to be represented to look after the interests of one of the entrans, comm. One man took one side of the bridge and his companion the other. By higher mathematics they figured that 3,050 cars passed the point in an hour.

VAST THRONG VIEWS CHERRY BLOSSOMS

Traffic Well Handled.

Despite the crush, traffic flowed with remarkable freshness. There were no jams and even short delays were exceptionally few. Around Hains Point, where the jams are usually experienced, there were few times during the day when traffic could not move at 12 miles an hour.

Park police had taken every precaution to provide for the throng. Every man was ordered to duty and told to stay on duty until relieved. And stay they did until about 8 o'clock last night, when things began to ease up to some extent. Most of them missed lunch, but their efficiency was praised last night by hundreds who took part in the spring parade.

Capt. Montgomery said last night that while the new routing of traffic had hardly received a fair test, due to the unprecedentd crowds, the new scheme appeared to be highly beneficial, particularly in respect to allowing a more flowing movement of traffic rturning from Hains Point.

Autos Are Diverted.

The plan suggested by Representative Frank L. Bowman, of West Virginia, provided for one-way traffic, city bound, between the Washington bridgehead of the highway bridge and a point southward of the outlet bridge. Traffic coming down Seventeenth street was turned to the right of the Paul Jons statue, to continue around the Tidal Basin. Traffic from Fourteenth street, away from the city was turned off to the right below the outlet bridge.

Representative Bowman was on hand almost the entire day to watch the plan work out. He took a station on the railroad overpass to watch the stream of traffic from Hains Point, and also made inspection trips with the park police in a motorcycle side car.

He and Capt. Montgomery agreed that in general, the plan was an improvement.

The flow of traffic was aided by Inspector Brown, of the Traffic Bureau, who ordered that B and C streets be made one-way east, in order to get traffic off Fourteenth street, and diverting traffic along Water street, destined for Fourteenth street, to Twelfth street. The traffic light at Fourteenth and Water streets was able to give the go signal almost continuously, according to Capt. Montgomery.

GROTTO OF OUR LADY OF LOURDES IS DEDICATED

The Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes at St. Mary's Church, dedicated last night by the Right Rev. Monsignor Bernard McKenna, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University. The Grotto was constructed under the direction of the Rev. Charles J. Trinkaus, pastor of St. Mary's Church.

LOAN SHARK LAW UP TO CITY, SAYS ROVER

U. S. Attorney Asserts Bride Has Jurisdiction Over Money Lenders.

Enforcement of the law against loan sharks here lies in the office of Corporation Counsel W. W. Bride, United States Attorney Leo A. Rover said yesterday, following the receipt by him of a letter from Representative F. H. LaGuardia, urging a drive to oust the money lenders from the city.

The United States attorney said his office had no authority under the laws to undertake a campaign against the so-called "big interest and commission" firms which are reputed to be thriving here. The law is purely local in character and has no bearing upon the duties assumed by the United State attorney.

Representative LaGuardia's letter to Mr. Rover, as follows:

My dear Mr. Rover: Statements have been made in the public press and on the floor of the House that the provisions of the interest and usury law of the District of Columbia are being flagrantly and daily violated by loan sharks. Section 27 of title 17 of the code of the District of Columbia, as you know, makes the violation of any provision of the usury law a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment in jail for net less than 5 nor more than 30 days for each offense.

Loan sharks are congenitally and inherently yellow and have a strong dislike for prison bars. A crusade against these sharks would drive them out of Washington in a short time. The law is very generous and allows them 12 per cent interest on small loans.

Though some of these sharks may have residence in neighboring States, you will have no difficulty in acquiring jurisdiction in that the transaction takes place in the District of Columbia and payments are usually made here.

It occurred to me that if you would assign one of your assistants to take care of these cases and make it known to the public that protection will be accorded and loan sharks who violate the law prosecuted, it will in a great measure correct existing conditions and protect the people of the District from continued unlawful exploitation.

I am sure of your cooperation and have no doubt of your desire to be helpful in this matter.

F. H. LA GUARDIA.

Man Cut Duringg Fight; Another Held in Fairfax

Stanley Riley, colored, of Sterling, Va., is in Fairfax County Jail, charged with cutting William Honesty, colored, early yesterday in a brawl at the home of "Bud" Nokes, on the Leesburg pike, about 3 miles east of Herndon.

According to Deputy Sheriff Vernon Cockerill the affray occurred about 5 o'clock in the morning. Riley had been released from the Loudoun County Jail the night before, where he had served 30 days for a liquor violation and paid $200 fine with his soldier bonus, received while in jail. He and Honesty, who is out on bond for a liquor charge, were celebrating his release when the fight occurred.

SERVICE FEATURES EDICT SIGNATURE

The Edict of Nantes, signed by Henry IV, giving Huguenot Protestants religious freedom and legal citizenship, was commemorated yesterday afternoon by the Huguenot Society of Washington with a service at St. John's Episcopal Church.

The service was made deeply impressive by the use of the Huguenot confession of sin, which was said for the first time before King Charles IX by Theodore de Beza, the great reformer. The confession was said by the Rev. Dr. Florian J. C. Vurpillot, chaplain of the Huguenot Society of Washington and pastor of the French congregation of St. John's Church. The Rev. Charles L. Carhart assisted him in conducting the service.

Another impressive feature of the service was the singing of La Cevenole, the Huguenot Marsellaise, by A. Harland Castle. This distinctive hymn is sung at all Huguenot services.

Preaching the sermon, Dr. Vurpillot took as text the verse: "Make the very most of the time because evil are the days." In the sermon, he declared: "Henry IV, in granting the edict of Nantes, worked for posterity and we are that posterity; therefore, we must be like the Huguenots—men of faith and liberty."

The Huguenot Society will hold a business meeting at 5 o'clock this afternoon in St. John's Parish Hall, when officers will be elected and annual reports read. Wednesday society members will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick at the Women's National Democratic Club. Mr. Herrick is president of the society.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

SCRAMBLED TOURISTS.

THE "full load" idea in pleasure cars is developing by leaps and bounces. The classified advertisement reading, "Gentlemen going to Kokomo in automobile could accommodate three others at low rates," has not been unfamiliar for the past few years, but today the proposition has become a big business.

* * * *

Bureaus are now operating in various big cities which will give you miscellaneous company on your long-distance auto trip at so much a head. They will even get a passenger for your rumble seat and sell space on the bumpers and roof.

* * * *

You notify a travel bureau that you are driving your car to Los Angeles and have room for four or five strangers. The bureau consults its list of catch-as-catch-can tourists and sees that you have plenty of assorted company.

* * * *

It cuts down the overhead, guarantees you plenty of help in making out the direction-post signs and assures you that all the back-seat driving will be done by persons who pay for the privilege.

* * * *

ONE of the great joys of motoring is the supreme satisfaction of knowing that every suggestion from the back sea is being made at space rates.

* * * *

These mixed foursomes offer adventure, companionship and even romance. Why drive a big car across the continent with only your wife to complain of your driving? Take along a college girl, a bootlegger, a poet and a vacuum cleaner salesman.

* * * *

Why go on a long tour with your Aunt Minnie when you can so easily find yourself taking the corners with a Russian prince, a minister, a third baseman, an opera singer and a flagpole sitter?

* * * *

It adds to the zest of the trip to know that the passenger who got out and helped you fix the carburetor is a banker with the wanderlust, that the fellow who helped change the tire is a vaudeville comedian and that the two gents in the back seat who want to stop every 2 miles for hot dogs are a couple of diet experts from Rochester.

* * * *

THE members of one of these "full load" tours are just jolly motorists worrying traffic cops, violating red lights and frightening pedestrians on a cooperative basis.

* * * *

Of course references are exchanged before signing up. The bureau looks up the applicants to see if they are the type an automobile owner would want to skid through fences with. And the bureau also investigates the owner to make sure the passengers are not thrown into the ditch with a social inferior.

* * * *

But mixed parties are always a hazard. And how would you enjoy taking your limousine to Florida and finding your companions were Smedley Butler, Harpo Marx, Ivy Lee, Texas Guinan, Billy Sunday and Al Capone?

SWEETHEART, there are times when I

But on such occasions my

Here's the burden of my plaint:
I dislike to hear you say
Phrases such as these, "I ain't,"
"Gimme them," "Oh, yeah," "O. K."

Get this, kid, some day I'll reach
For my gat, and shoot, for you
Gotta brush up on your speech,
Or else me 'n' you is through.

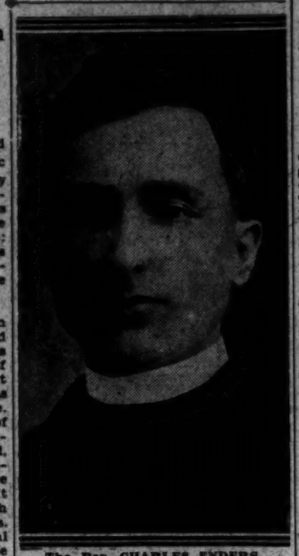
God Declared Ready To Receive Everyone

Distinctions Not Made in Kingdom, Declares Concordia Pastor.



The Rev. CHARLES ENDERS.

Citizenship in the Kingdom of God and what it implies was the topic of yesterday morning's sermon by the Rev. Charles Enders, at Concordia Litheran Church. Mr. Enders took as his text the nineteenth verse of the second chapter of Ephesians: "So shen ye are no more strangers and sojourners, but ye are fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."

He spoke in part as follows:

"Christ spoke of the ideal life in terms of a kingdom. This should not seem strange. Men have always thought of the ideal life in terms of a commonwealth. The Greeks dreamt of an ideal republic. The Romans sought to establish an ideal empire. The Jews lived in expectation of the Messianic Kingdom. Human endeavors to realize these ideals failed, because they were too closely associated with the material. They were based largely on physical force. It was the sword that should establish and maintain these commonwealths. Christ, however, came with a spiritual ideal. His is a kingdom of truth. He is to triumph not by physical force or human ingenuity, but by the power of the spirit. All who accept Him as their Saviour and Lord become citizens of the Kingdom of God for time and for eternity.

No Distinction Made.

"Our text deals with citizenship in this Kingdom of God and tells what is implied in such citizenship.

"Citizenship in the Kingdom of God knows no racial or social distinctions.

"Paul in writing to the Christians at Ephesus says: 'Ye are no more strangers and sojourners.' This statement applies both to men's relationship to God and to the relationship among one another.

"As nonbelievers the Ephesians had not been citizens of the Kingdom of God. They had been strangers, aliens. Even if they had become proselytes of Israel, they fared no better than the Israelites who were only sojourners. They had become citizens of the Kingdom of God by accepting Jesus Christ as their Saviour and Lord. Because of their faith in Christ they were no longer strangers and sojourners but fully recognized citizens. Citizenship in the Kingdom of God can be conferred only on those who believe in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, as Saviour and Lord.

Offered to All Who Believe.

"This privilege of citizenship in the Kingdom of God, however, is offered to all who will believe, irrespective of race or nationality. It had been very difficult for the Jewish Christians to grasp this truth. Jews and gentiles had been sojourners and strangers not only with respect to God, but also with respect to one another. Racial animosity separated them from one another. We are reminded of the intensity of this feeling when we recall that the death penalty was inflicted on gentiles, who dared enter the inner court of the temple at Jerusalem. We recall, too, that the hatred of the Jews for the Christians was increased by the fact of the gospel's being preached to both Jew and gentile.

"The Kingdom of God, however, recognizes no racial distinctions, but offers its citizenship to all who believe in Christ. This must be reflected also in the attitude of the individual Christians to one another. In Christ Jesus the members of different races must cease to be strangers to one another. We must find the solution of our racial problems in Christian fellowship.

Admits to Fellowship.

"A second characteristic of citizenship in the Kingdom of God is that it admits to the fellowship of the saints. When the Apostle Paul writes of being 'fellow-citizens with the saints,' he is not referring to believers who have passed out of this life and are perfected in the life beyond. His saints are men and women who are living here in time. He is not singling out certain men and women who are noted for their piety. The fact that he uses this term 'saints' in nearly all of his letters to the various congregations indicates that he includes all Christians in this term.

"These people, whom Paul calls 'saints,' were far from being perfect. He often rebukes them because of their imperfections. With all their faults, however, he calls them 'saints.' They were saints because they loved the Lord Jesus Christ and by their faith in Him had dedicated their lives to God, because they had in them the promise of perfection, and because they were striving after sainthood.

Some Are Hypocrites.

"The church is often criticized as having hypocrites among its members. No doubt, there are some hypocrites in the church. On the whole, however, it is very unfair to accuse the members of the church of being hypocrites. The church is not an association of perfect people, but rather a body of very imperfect people who realize their imperfections and are members of the church, because they hope to become better through the church. Even though citizens of the Kingdom of God stumble and fall, their failings and shortcomings would be much greater if they did not have the support of the fellowship of the saints to sustain and encourage them in their striving after sainthood. The fellowship of the saints creates an atmosphere which makes it easier for the individual believer to live according to the principles of Christ. When Sherwood Eddy returned from a world tour, he was asked to state his impressions of the influence of the Christian church. He answered that he would rather live in the poorest village with a church than in the greatest metropolis with all the power and wealth of modern civilization without a church. There is a power unto Christian living in the fellowship of the saints.

"Finally, citizenship in the Kingdom of God admits to the household of God. It is a terrible fact that sin separates from God. As long as man remains a servant of sin, he remains a stranger with respect to God. But when a man turns from sin and through faith in Jesus Christ accepts the grace of God, he becomes not only a citizen of the Kingdom of God but also a child of God. He no longer has the spirit of bondage unto fear, but he has the spirit of adoption, whereby he cries: 'Abba, Father.'

Obligations Are Opportunities.

"As a citizen of the Kingdom of God the Christian's relation to the king is not merely that of a loyal subect to his ruler, but rather that of a son to his father. The more fully that the Christian enters into this fellowship of the household of God, the more will he be concerned not about obeying laws but about doing God's will. The obligations of citizenship are not grievous burdens, but rather opportunities to express one's love to the heavenly Father.

"Through this fellowship of the household of God the citizen of the kingdom has free access to the inexhaustible resources of God. He can approach God and receive from Him guidance and power to make his life worth while. Ask and ye shall receive; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you—was spoken to citizens of the kingdom as members of the household of God.

"Citizenship in the Kingdom of God far from conferring only blessings for the life to come, is the most fruitful means of helping in the solution of present problems and in making life worth while, both in time and in eternity."

EXACT SCALE MODEL PLANES TO COMPETE

Annual Contest of Aircraft League Will Open This Week.

The annual contest and exhibition of true scale models of airplanes and gliders will be held by the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League Thursday to Sunday in the National Museum, Tenth street and Constitution avenue. The exhibition and contest is open to all visitors or competitors.

Three classes of entries will be open: Baby, Class A, contained within the span of a man's hand; Detroit, Class B, wing span of exactly 24 inches; optional, Class C, all otoher sizes of models up to 60-inch wing span, not included in Classes A and B. Planes submitted must be scale models of real planes or gliders and must be built entirely by contestant. Planes entered in previous contests will not be eligible in the 1931 event.

A special feature of this season's exhibition will be a series of models illustrating the evolution of high-powered sea planes, built by members of the Capital Model Aero Club, under direction of Paul Edward Garber, of the division of mechanical technology of the Smithsonian Institution. Scale models now being completed for the exhibition this week reproduced various winners of the Schneider Cup races.

The Schneider Cup was first offered in 1913, by Jacques Schneider, of France, and was won that year by a De Perdussin model, making 45 miles an hour. John Pendleton, of this city, is now completing a scale model of this famous plane, obtained from plans and pictures of the original in the Library of Congress. Other boys are making scale models of subsequent winners of this trophy.

Following conclusion of the exhibition Sunday, this series of model planes will become part of the permanent national aircraft exhibit of the National Museum. Planes must be delivered between 3 and 5 o'clock p. m., April 15, at the museum.

WET 1932 PRESIDENT SEEN BY MRS. SABIN

Democratic national committee?

Smilingly, Mrs. Sabin protests she is not familiar with the details of Mr. Raskob's plan, but she favors repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"How about supporting a particular wet candidate?"

"It's too early to talk about candidates," Mrs. Sabin protests. "That must wait until the conventions. The important thing is a repeal plank in the platforms because the candidates will be bound to support their platforms."

Did Mrs. Sabin think both parties would adopt repeal platforms?

As to that she couldn't say, but "if one party doesn't, the other will; you can be sure of that."

As Mrs. Sabin talked in convention headquarters delegates were arriving for the meeting tomorrow.

"Over a thousand live and vigorous refutations to Mrs. Henry W. Peabody's statement that 'women of America favor prohibition,' was the way a statement from convention headquarters described the incoming delegates.

Mrs. Sabin described as "ludicrous" the assertion of Mrs. Peabody and her associates that they represent 12,000,000 women. "A few women speaking for thousands of others for whom they have no right to speak has been so overdone in this country that no one takes it seriously," she declared. "The name of Mrs. Peabody's organization—the national committee for law enforcement—is a misnomer unless the organization is also working for the enforcement of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution, and all the obsolete blue laws that are still on our statute books," she added.

In the meanwhile, the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, headed by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, offered prayers for President Hoover and for "the misguided opponents" of prohibition, and concluded its three-day conference.

It was announced that the law enforcement committee, an affiliation of organizations with a membership of 12,000,000 women, had presented to President Hoover a composite report on prohibition, with its pledge to support his stand on the dry law.

Police Asked to Hunt Woman.

Police yesterday were asked to aid in finding Mrs. Elizabeth Ronalde, 28 years old, who disappeared from her home at 933 L street northwest, April 8. According to her husband, A. H. Ronalde, who reported her absence to police, when last seen she was wearing a dark coat and hat.

Value Saves Snake at Zoo From Being Cobra Dinner

By virtue of being valuable, one of the National Zoo's most recent snake additions has escaped a horrible death in the King Cobra's cage.

The reptile is a brown water snake captured by Samuel Perkins, artist and nature student, while on a tramp through the woods. Mr. Perkins presented it to the zoo with the thought that since the Cobra has refused to eat a bull snake it might accept the water snake as a choice tid bit.

The brown water snake is very common in the South, but its northern range is the Potomac River and it is rarely seen this far north. For that reason this specimen is more valuable for exhibition purposes than feeding cobras, so the reptile was added to the District collection of snakes, reserved for those found within a radius of 40 miles of Washington.

Officials at the zoo yesterday answered many queries about their experiment in attempting to hatch condors' eggs, but as yet there has been no indication that it will be successful.
